Divide Holy Land Between Jews, Arabs, U.N. Told

Report Suggests Economic Union, Free Jerusalem And Immigration

Lake Success, Aug. 31 (AP).—The United Nations Palestine Committee majority recommended tonight the partition of the Holy Land, formation of an economic union there, and admission of 150,000 Jews to Palestine during a two-year transitional period beginning tomorrow.

Abdul Rahman Azzam Pasha, secretary general of the seven-state Arab League and one of the chief Arab spokesmen, immediately assailed the report as "absolutely impracticable."

"I do not think the Assembly will take it," he said in a statement. "It does not solve anything. It only makes the situation worse."

Jewish Agency Silent

The five Arab states in the U. N.—Egypt, Iraq, Syria, Lebanon and Saudi Arabia—are certain to fight the whole committee report in the Assembly, which will convene September 16. The Arabs demand an independent Arab Palestine, no more Jewish immigration, and termination now of the British mandate over the Holy Land.

There was no statement here from the Jewish Agency for Palestine, which has demanded a Jewish state in the Holy Land and increased Jewish immigration.

The committee majority proposed that the immigrants be permitted into Palestine while the Holy Land is being transferred into the economic union made up of one Arab state, one Jewish state and the autonomous city of Jerusalem.

Other salient points favored by the majority made up of Canada, Czechoslovakia, Guatemala, The Netherlands, Peru, Sweden and Uruguay:

1. That Britain, which holds the mandate over Palestine, continue her administration during the transitional period, with the possible assistance of other U. N. states.

2. That the Arab and Jewish states will become independent after the transitional period of two years beginning September 1, 1947, and after they have signed a treaty setting up a system of economic collaboration.

3. That if the transitional period is longer than two years, Jewish immigration shall be extended at the rate of 5000 per month, the present quota is 1500 per month.

Make Recommendations

The Committee unanimously recommended that:

1. The 25-year mandate of Britain be terminated at the earliest practicable moment.

2. That independence be granted in Palestine at the earliest practicable date.

3. That in whatever solution is

Russian Officers Interned as Plane Is Forced Down

Istanbul, Turkey, Aug. 31 (U.P.).—A Soviet plane carrying a Russian general and two other officers made a forced landing near Smyrna, 200 miles south of the nearest Soviet-controlled territory along the Bulgarian border, and all on board have been interned, the newspaper Tanin reported today.

United Press reports from Ankara said the plane landed in the village of Kocarli.

Smyrna is on the Aegean Sea, on the west coast of Turkey.

Tanin also reported that seven Bulgarians, including five former members of Parliament who are followers of Nikola Petkov, Agrarian party leader who has been sentenced to death by the Communist-dominated government on charges of conspiracy, have crossed into Turkey seeking refuge. They fled after the death sentence was imposed on Petkov, the paper reported.

Air Forces To Pit P-80 Against B-45

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Important lessons regarding the armament, armor and combat tactics of jet fighters and bombers are expected to be learned from exhaustive tests planned by the Army Air Forces.

Lockheed P-80 Shooting Star fighters will be pitted against Douglas B-45 jet bombers in a series of realistic "air battles."

The combat-type operations are tentatively scheduled to be held over the Army test center at the Muroc Dry-Lake in California. The date has not been fixed.

They will closely resemble the wartime aerial combat over Europe between Flying Fortresses and Messerschmidts, except the jet fighters and bombers will be traveling at twice their forerunners' speed. And camera guns will be used instead of live bullets.

Maj. Gen. Elwood R. Quesada, chief of the Tactical Air Command, says the AAF hopes to learn:

Where to put armor-plate, particularly on the bombers.

Where to mount guns on the aircraft. Some experts feel only tail guns will be required on bombers.

The best attack and defense methods for the jet fighters and bombers.

Army Rebels In Two Cities Of Ecuador

Quito, Ecuador, Aug. 31 (AP).—Army and constabulary officers rebelled in two cities of Ecuador last night against the week-old regime of Col. Carlos Mancheno, and today he sped troops and Lend-Lease tanks to quell the challenge to his virtual dictatorial powers.

The government clamped a state of siege over the whole republic tonight, prohibiting publication or radio broadcast of news concerning the revolt and limiting the movement of all vehicles.

The army turned against Mancheno in Riobamba, city of 24,000 in the state of Chimborazo approximately 100 miles south of Quito, and in Guaranda, 20 miles west of Riobamba in adjoining Bolivar State.

The cabinet, after a lengthy emergency session, issued a communique describing the revolt in Riobamba as "a small, seditious outbreak whose brain-trusters (mentalizadores) are leaders of the Conservative Party," and asserting the government was in complete control "in the rest of the republic."

Mancheno, who ousted President Jose Maria Velasco Ibarra in a bloodless "single shot" revolution last Sunday, was apparently caught by surprise with the new turn of events.

He was at Tulcan near the Colombian border, where he went yesterday to dedicate an airport. He hurried back to the capital, but

Strachey Contends Dollar Shortage Forces Move for Present at Least

London, Aug. 31 (AP).—Food Minister John Strachey disclosed tonight that Britain had stopped buying food from the United States "for the time being" because of her dollar shortage.

"We can manage, if necessary, for some time without buying food from that source," he said in a speech at Dundee, Scotland.

He added that Britain was continuing to import cotton, machinery, tobacco and some other items from the United States.

Buying Dwindles After Loan

Since war days Britain has depended on the U. S. for a considerable variety of food, including wheat, canned foods of various kinds, dried eggs and fruit. Purchases began dwindling with the $3,750,000,000 American loan.

Strachey's speech turned the limelight from the Yorkshire coal strike, which appeared nearing an end with 12,000 miners voting to return to work after Fuel Minister Emanuel Shinwell told them Britain was "hanging on a thread." Four thousand others voted to stay out. Shinwell sounded the warning at a half dozen strikers' meetings in Yorkshire, and said:

"If anything else goes wrong in Britain, the miners' five-day week and Saturday holidays with pay will not be worth anything."

The 4000 who voted to stay out included miners at the Grimethorpe pit where the walkout started three weeks ago. The men refused to work 23 feet of coal face daily instead of 21. The National Union of Mine Workers has condemned the strike as a wildcat affair.

New Threat Crops Up

A new threat in coal deliveries cropped up. The executive council of the Clerical and Administrative Workers called a strike for September 8 of its 10,000 colliery office ployes as a protest against coal board delay in establishing negotiating machinery.

The British press headlined unconfirmed reports that an "empire economic conference" would be held here in September to discuss the formation of a "sterling bloc" in view of the empire's dollar shortage.

At Dundee, Strachey said the only way Britain can get dollars to buy more American goods is for the United States to increase her purchases from Britain.

"Unfortunately, America does not buy much from abroad over her high-tariff system," he said. "That is why we shall have to limit our purchases in the United States very strictly indeed."

Harry Pollitt, general secretary of the Communist Party, advocated in an open letter to Prime Minister Attlee that additional manpower for key industries be provided by reducing Britain's armed forces by 500,000, and by bringing home all

Beville Captures 105-Mile Air Race At 384 MPH Speed

Cleveland, Aug. 31 (AP).—Two pilots whizzed through a 105-mile race for P-51 Mustangs at the National Air Races today at speeds better than the winning pace in last year's 300-mile Thompson Trophy classic, and above the recognized world record for closed course events.

The Thompson will be the closing feature of the racing program tomorrow.

Kendall Everson of Cleveland averaged 377.9 for $1000 second money.

Last year's Thompson speed was 373.9.

The record for the course is 374 miles an hour.

Tony le Vier of La Canada, Calif., won today's Sohio race for P-38 Lightnings with a speed of 360.8 miles an hour. He also took $3000 to add to $1660 won earlier with his midget Little Tony racer in four sections of the Goodyear trophy race.

Beville and Le Vier are among the 12 pilots who qualified for the Thompson event tomorrow. Beville had a qualifying run of 366.8 and Le Vier 366.6. Both were well under the Thompson qualifying speed of Cook Cleland, who did 401.7 in his Corsair.

Ruth Johnson of Upland, Calif., set a new record for the Halle race for women with a speed of 223.3 miles per hour. She took home a $2500 first prize.

Jet planes figured in today's program was a nonstop run to Indianapolis and return, won by Capt. Richard H. Burnor of Monterey, Calif., with 494.2 miles an hour.

Back of Beville and Everson in the Kendall race was Woody Edmondson of Lynchburg, Va., who won $750 third prize money with a speed of 372.3.

Administration Starts Drive On High Prices

Schwellenbach Also Warns Workers on New Pay Demands

Secretary of Labor Lewis B. Schwellenbach last night touched off a new Administration drive to "talk prices down" by denouncing what he called widespread efforts to blame all high prices on wage increases.

But he cautioned the Nation's workers to go slow in new wage demands, declaring in a Labor Day Eve speech that the past two years have shown rather clearly that efforts to "catch up" are "will-o'-the-wisp . . . like a dog who chases his tail and is never quite able to reach it."

Schwellenbach's warning to industry that it could not place all the responsibility for high prices upon labor costs was interpreted here as another step in the Administration anti-high price campaign.

Linked to Truman Program

Only last week, it was learned that Mr. Truman would renew his efforts to get industry to lower prices. Schwellenbach's speech was considered the keynote to Mr. Truman's revived program.

He spoke over the Mutual network after Earl Bunting, president of the National Association of Manufacturers said in a Labor Day statement that, "in spite of all the hubub about high prices," the workers are far better off today than they were before the war.

Meantime, union leaders, with a hint of support from the President, joined in appealing to the workers to strive for repeal of the Taft-Hartley Law.

AFL President William Green and CIO President Philip Murray called on their 13,750,000 members to join in an "unrelenting campaign to wipe this infamous law from the statute books" and to "defeat for reelection every member of Congress who voted" for it.

President John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers urged its 500,000 members to use their voting power next year to nominate pro-labor

Presidential Plane Reaches Trinidad on Way to Brazil

By Merriman Smith

Port of Spain, Trinidad, Aug. 31 (U.P.).—President Truman landed at Waller Field at 4:50 p. m. (EDT) today in his new flying White House, the DC-6 Independence. He is on his way to Brazil to address the closing session of the Inter-American Conference and take part in Brazilian independence day celebrations.

Mrs. Truman, their daughter, Margaret, the Brazilian Ambassador and his wife and a party of White House aides were with the President for his first trip in the four-motored plane which made the flight here from the National Airport in Washington in 7 hours and 41 minutes at an average speed of about 290 miles an hour.

Bright sunshine broke through rain clouds over the mountains which ring Waller Field—still an American Air Force outpost on this British island—as the President, in jovial mood, stepped from the Independence.

Those awaiting him included Col. Aaron J. Becker, senior United States Army officer and Trinidad governor and commander in chief Sir John Shaw.

Tropical showers intermittently doused the field as Col. Becker introduced Sir John Shaw and the other officials.

A band played nonstop: The Star Spangled Banner, God Save the King, Hail to the Chief, and the Missouri Waltz.

Lieut. Col. Henry T. Myers, veteran presidential pilot, was in charge of what he said was an uneventful flight from Washington most of it at 20,000 feet altitude.

The President was pleased with the flight. He showed great interest in the operation of his new plane and spent some time in the cockpit watching Col. Myers and his crew working it.

Because of the high altitude, the President saw little of either Caribbean Islands or the sea except when passing San Juan, Puerto Rico, on the way to this island 10 degrees above the equator.

The President, Mrs. Truman and Miss Truman are spending the night at Colonel Becker's home—Jungle House.

The road to the home was dotted with signs showing the way to hurricane shelters—which are not needed until the hurricane season opens in mid-September.

The presidential party takes off between 2 and 3 a. m. (EDT) tomorrow for Belem, Brazil, then to Rio de Janeiro. There will be a 45-minute refueling stop at Belem before the plane goes on to complete a 5200-mile flight from Washington.

The President will address the closing session of the Inter-American Conference at the Quitandinha Hotel at Petropolis at 10:30 a. m. Tuesday (9:30 a. m. EDT) and return to Rio De Janeiro for the formal defense treaty signing at the Iramarty Palace, the Brazilian foreign office, in the afternoon.

After reviewing the Brazilian independence day parade Sunday the President will leave for home aboard the battleship Missouri.

29th Convention Ends

New York, Aug. 31 (AP).—The American Legion today adopted a program for the coming year accenting a militant anti-Communist stand at home and abroad and chose James F. O'Neil of Manchester, N. H., a World-War I infantryman, as its new national commander.

The 49-year-old O'Neil, who is police chief in his home city, made plain in a brief acceptance talk to the twenty-ninth national convention that he was in full accord with the Legion's sharp denunciation of communism.

He remarked, however, that he also would lead the fight on "other subversive elements." O'Neil was assailed by backers of his opponents as the choice of the legendary Legion "kingmakers" but he won an easy victory by acclamation.

Approves Marshall Plan

In winding up the convention, the Legionnaires not only unloosed blasts against communism but also recommended that the Nation guard its greatest weapon by declining to reveal atomic energy secrets to anyone and build up its manpower reservoir by adopting universal military training.

The convention gave full approval to the Marshall Plan for aid to Europe after terming "the aggressive spirit of communism the greatest menace facing America today," and called for outlawing of the Communist Party as a political group in the United States.

A spirited debate on veterans' housing brought the first roll call vote of the final session and resulted in a 2796-to-722 defeat for proponents of the Wagner-Ellender-Taft housing bill.

Communists Assume Lead In Hungary

American Observers Describe Election As 'Greatest' Fraud

By Jack Guinn

Budapest (Monday) Sept. 1 (AP).—First official but incomplete returns in Sunday's Hungarian national elections showed the Communist Party—accused earlier by other parties of widespread plural voting—had a plurality of more than 15,000 in Budapest and a smaller lead in the nation as a whole.

[American observers described Hungary's election as "the greatest vote fraud ever perpetrated," the United Press reported.

[A high British source said: "There appears no doubt there has been a large-scale falsification of the ballot."

[The United Press said 14 carloads of American observers, who toured all parts of Hungary during the balloting, reported that as many as 750,000 fraudulent voting cards had been used again and again by flying squads of "repeat" voters sent out by the Communists.

[Social Democrat headquarters in Budapest declared early returns showed Communists had 8624 votes out of 29,825 tallied, and more than any other party.]

The first official returns for Budapest, released for publication early this morning by the Hungarian foreign office press department, said Deputy Premier Matyas Rakosi's Communist Party had received 37,308 of the 118,771 Budapest votes so far counted.

The former majority party, the Smallholders, which won 57 per cent of the votes in the 1945 elections, had dropped to 8.9 per cent, receiving 10,907 in the incomplete count.

The first unofficial results from a 148-man voting district in Budapest consisting entirely of the Boszormenyi street police station and barracks failed to show a single vote for the Small Holders Party, which received 57 per cent of the

Many Residents Know Little Of Communism—But Fear It

Many Washingtonians know little about what Communists in this country stand for, The Washington Post Poll reports.

Forty-six per cent were unable to state any beliefs of American Communists.

Answers of the remaining 54 per cent were spread out among various views of what American Communists stand for. The largest number, 14 per cent, stated that Communists stand for Government ownership or control of property, and opposition to capitalism. Thirteen per cent said Communists believe in redistribution of wealth so that everyone would get the same amount of money. Twelve per cent stated that American Communists accept the policies of Russia, or follow the Kremlin line. Other policies mentioned include: Totalitarianism, or dictatorship by the working class; equality and fairness for all; opposition to democratic principles; wiping out social distinctions, and atheism.

Scanty information about Communist doctrine does not prevent many people from [illegible]

Nite attitudes toward Communists. Thirty-eight per cent who think they are very dangerous don't know what Communists stand for.

Asked what American Communists are trying to accomplish, 31 per cent could give no relevant reply.

Twenty-three per cent stated they are trying to overthrow the Government; 22 per cent said their objective was to spread Communistic doctrine. Other goals mentioned included: Personal power and gain; achievement of ideological goals, such as redistribution of wealth, etc.; expansion of Russian power; world domination.

These findings of The Washington Post poll are based on personal interviews with a representative cross-section of people living in Greater Washington.

Local residents were asked:

"There has been so much talk about communism in this country that we'd like to know what people are thinking. What do you think is Communist in this country?"

Lulling Cicada Hum Sets Pace For District's Stay-at-Homes

The insistent, yet lulling, note of the dog-day cicada set the key for the activities of Greater Washington stay-at-homes yesterday.

For those who did not follow the thousands of more restless holiday seekers to the beaches and the mountains, the mid-weekend Sunday was an opportunity to get out with the family for a picnic in the park, a boat ride on the river—or a snooze in the backyard hammock.

The downtown streets, the bus terminals, the Union Station and the National Airport, scenes of activity on Friday night and Saturday, were almost empty yesterday, though today would tell a different story.

The summer sun, which shone brightly most of the day, sent the mercury up to a 91-degree high at 4:10 p. m., but the heat was tempered by soft breezes as Washington nodded drowsily.

Rock Creek Park, Hains Point and other recreation areas were dotted with lolling figures digesting sandwiches, potato chips and olives. Portable play pens for the children were set up in the cooling shade of adjacent trees.

At the Soldiers' Home, veterans of various wars sat reading, talking quietly or drowsing on benches under the trees.

The river was dotted with sail and motor boats, rowboats and canoes. Excursion boats had a good day. The national monu-

Cohen Says SEC Denied Him Chance to Answer Charges

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

Frank Cohen, New York industrialist, told The Washington Post yesterday he had repeatedly been refused access to a 1943 report of the Securities and Exchange Commission criticizing operations of himself and companies he headed.

He said he never had seen the report and knew only of those parts of it referred to in newspaper accounts.

Cohen, head of a number of manufacturing enterprises, organized Empire Ordnance Corp. to produce guns and armor for British tanks in the early part of World War II. After entry of the United States into the war, his plants continued manufacturing munitions under War Department contracts.

Recently, through Senator Brewster (R., Me.) and the city of Eastport, Me., he has sought to acquire Quoddy Village near Eastport as a training center for displaced persons. He announced in connection with this project that the DPs would be transferred to South America after being trained.

Referring to published criticisms of his prior operations contained in the SEC report and a 1942 Truman Committee report, Cohen said:

Financial Stability Of Nations Stressed

After 45 Years

Wainwright Ends Career In U. S. Army

GEN. JONATHAN WAINWRIGHT

San Antonio, Tex., Aug. 31 (U.P.).—A lanky, well-tanned military man delivered his valedictory address today and, with the sound of marching feet and martial music echoing in his ears, strode down from a reviewing platform at Fort Sam Houston into civilian life after 45 years in the service of his Nation's flag.

Gen. Jonathan Mayhew Wainwright, who became a national hero in defeat at Corregidor, fought tears as he came to end of his soldering career at the age of 64.

His eyes were misty as he flashed a snappy salute. The last flag of the military review in his honor on this hot Sunday passed by, and the starins of "Auld Lang Syne" floated up tothe stand from the marchin gfield where some 2500 troops had marched in precise, military formation and three combined bands formed a large letter "W."

The entire ceremony lasted a little more than an hour for the man whom General MacArthur was ordered to leave behind on Corregidor to make a valiant but doomed last-ditch stand against the Japanese in the Philippines.

Wainwright was the highest ranking American held by the Japanese. He emerged weakened and thin beyond the point that long before had given him the nickname "Skinny," but his grin still flashed and his head was unbowed.

The old "horse soldier" read his own retirement order. It was not an easy task and Wainwrigth was openly sentimental.

Gen. Thomas T. Handy will succeed Wainwright, who was commander of the Fourth Army.

Wainwright said "many who have gone before me have made this exit from an active military career not able to speak their farewell words, but their actions, their spirit and leadership are the fundamentals of the great tradition and esprit de corps that bids us to continue to live and fight for those things that we all hold dear."

Wainwright went to his new home—"Fiddlers Green." In Army legend, Fiddlers Green is the home of all retired cavalrymen.

Wainwright now will devote himself to stock raising and grocery merchandising and manufacturing.

His military career began at West Point in 1902. In World War I he served with the Eighty-second Infantry Division in France.

Internal Action Held Needed to Get Marshall Plan Aid

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter
(Third of a Series)

Paris—Second only in importance to increased production is the internal financial stability of nations seeking to qualify for Marshall Plan aid.

Sixteen participating nations at the Paris Conference understand that the United States cannot be expected to grant aid to countries which have no promise of setting their own finances at rights. Otherwise the Marshall Plan would indeed be "Operation Rathole."

Therefore, the conferring nations will seek to include in their commitments a monetary and budgetary housecleaning.

Stability Held Essential

It goes without saying that international monetary stability is essential to large-scale international trade. And it is also true that sound currencies and finances in each country can only be built if its economy is sound.

Sixteen nations in the conference hope to rectify their finances, therefore, by first increasing production. American aid, they hope, will assist in this basic first step.

There is some thought here, however, that some American credits will also be necessary for financial purposes, perhaps as the basis for a west European clearing house establishment. It would have the job of helping in currency settlements and serve as a sort of smaller scale international monetary fund.

Regarding internal stability of finances, Italy and France have the biggest problems. Both face extended budgetary difficulties.

France Takes Steps

In France, powerful government groups are seriously pushing for the difficult and painful steps to be taken for currency stabilization. This involves:

1. Major readjustment of prices here preferably by operations of a more free market than now exists.

2. Wiping out of the artificial and practically unworkable exchange level between the franc and the dollar, and its placement by a realistic ratio. In other words, devaluation.

3. Balancing the French budget, a process which requires drastic axing of the present swollen bureaucracy; wiping out the black market in order to obtain transaction taxes from legal business; resolute control of special social welfare and other government projects.

These last tasks will be particularly difficult from the political point of view. Pressure groups, not among the least of which is the army, will fight hard against dropping their pet projects.

It is not assured when or even if France can accomplish currency stabilization. Therefore, it is still not clear what sort of commitments France and other financially embarrassed nations can make in the Paris Conference report.

But certainly some serious and important promises in this direction are essential and almost certainly will be included in the report.

nationwide vote in the 1945 elections. Prominent anti-Communist leaders of that middle-of-the-road party, including former Premier Ferenc Nagy, have fled the country, blaming Communist pressure for their fate.

Three Communists Slain

The police station returns gave the Communists 63, the Social Democrats 59, the Hungarian Independent Party 15, Peasant Party 10 and the Citizens Democratic Party one vote. The four other parties in the election failed to get any votes.

A reliable Hungarian attorney who supplied the unofficial figures said they were noteworthy because the police were supposed to be about 90 per cent Communists, and it would seem that some had not voted for their own party.

[Seymour Freidin, of the New York Herald-Tribune reported many non-Communists were dienfranchised through a trick. Socialists told Freidin that their members who received legal non-resident permits were refused the vote because their permits lacked the proper stamps. The Socialists and other non-Communists said they did not know about the stamps until the polls opened.

[Freidin said Hungary's election was a violation of every precept laid down at the Yalta Conference and it continued the type of "free elections" established in Soviet-influenced eastern Europe.]

[Three Communists were slain and a vice premier admitted 3000 persons were caught voting repeatedly, the United Press said.

[Communist Vice Premier Matyas Rakosi said the government was investigating the deaths to see if they were linked with the election "because we do not want to make political capital of the incidents."

"Flying Electors" Charged

[Rakosi, Moscow-trained in the years between the two world wars said his reports indicated that "not more than 3000 persons" were guilty of voting as repeaters. Apologizing for the "bad light cast on the elections," he said the number was small compared with the electorate of more than five million.]

The Communists were charged with using "flying electors," transported in special trucks, for plural balloting.

Members of other parties, including the Communists' long-time political associates, the Social Democrats, registered indignation over the Communist tactics. In Budapest, reports were heard that the Social Democrats had captured 150 plural voters and turned them over to police.

[International News Service said the vote fraud situation was so serious that the Social Democratic Party convened its council in extraordinary session to decide what to do.]

Complaints from the Hungarian Independence Party, said that in Debrecen an estimated 20,000 false votes had been cast by persons having apparently unlimited supplies of the little blue paper authorizations for voting away from one's residence. Similar reports came from Szeged, Pecs, Szombathely and Mako.

Pfeiffer party officials said all members except Communists of the Debrecen central electoral committee wanted to stop the elections, but since they could not do so legally they refused to accept additional blue paper authorizations.

Hungarian Radical Party informants said that at Debrecen 15,000 prisoners of war arrived from Russia at 9 a. m. and all had voted within a half hour at special tables set up in the railway station.

This correspondent, accompanied by representatives of the New York Times and New York Herald Tribune, visited several villages between Budapest and the Lake Balaton area.

We followed the path of a Budapest city sanitation truck from Szekesfehervar to Vertesacs to Barackska. In each place we were told at the polls that 25 persons riding in the truck had stopped to vote.

American correspondents were greeted with friendliness at most places visited. An exception was the village of Barackaska, where a local Communist pointed to the Americans and said "those dirty swine bombed us with large bombs in the war."

At another village a member of the Small Holders Party said "if this keeps up it will lead to civil war." He said that "not so long ago blood flowed in Hungary, and if citizens' rights are cut off, blood will flow again."

[Six opposition parties vied with the Communists and Social Democrats for the big middle class vote in the election, International News Service said.

[This opposition group gave the numerically powerful Small Holders Party a 57 per cent majority in the last election in 1945, against the 17 per cent received by the Communists.

[The Small Holders since then have made drastic internal policy changes, aligning them with the Communists in the coalition following the Communist coup against Premier Nagy last May.

'Mr. Fitz' Recovers About Half Of 11,000 Bikes Stolen Yearly

By Alfred E. Lewis
Post Reporter

There are about 1100 bicycles stolen every year in the District and Detective Sergt. Timothy Aloysius Fitzgerald, the Police Department's one-man bike squad recovers about half of them.

To do his job properly, Fitzgerald says, he must be a combination detective, mechanic, diplomat and father.

"There is no organized racket for stealing bikes in the District," the detective, known as "Mr. Fitz" to the kids, asserts. "But some kids that can't afford to buy them steal them.. Only occasionally do you run across a repeater."

"Last week I picked up a 16-year old kid who had been released from the reform school after serving two years. He had a brand-new bike. It talked to him for a while and he told me he had stolen it. He also told me about a friend who had a stolen one. So I recovered two bicycles."

Cruises Streets

"Mr. Fitz," a bicycle retriever for 26 years, spends the majority of his time cruising the streets, visiting bicycle shops and second hand dealers. Many stolen bikes are sold to the latter.

Last week, Fitzgerald uncovered a "Fagin" in the bike stealing business. He said he recovered three bicycles from a second hand shop. The dealer said that a man brought them in. Further investigation showed that some boys had stolen the bikes and turned them over to the man to sell.

All bicycles bear a serial number—and that's the way "Mr. Fitz" identifies them. He keeps serial numbers in a book whcih dates back to 1943. Two weeks ago he recovered a bicycle that was stolen in July 1943.

On August 1 there were seven bicycles stolen from Bolling Field where they were having an air show. By last Monday, Fitzgerald had recovered five of them and arrested five boys.

Stolen Bikes Dismantled

The hardest part about that case, the detective said, was getting the bicycles back in their original form. The boys had dismantled them and traded parts to conceal the identities.

"I was cruising when a motorcycle policeman hailed me and told me that there were boys in an alley taking some bicycles apart. I found one bicycle with the numbers chipped off," the detective said.

"Two boys admitted that the bike was stolen and then showed me where four other bicycles were hidden. They had traded parts, frames, wheels, forks, handlebars and even seats.

"I rounded up all five of the boys, brought them and the bicycles down to headquarters and made them reassemble the bikes in their original forms. Then I called the owners, told them to come and get their property, and took the other boys to Juvenile Court.

Probation On First Offense

"What will they get? If it is a first offense they will get probation. After that it is up to the authorities, depending upon circumstances."

Detective Fitzgerald, who lives at Hermitage Park, Md., has a 14-year-old son, and says he likes all the kids, and what's more "they like me too."

"They all get a break from me, those that steal them and those that have them stolen."

"You will do me a favor if you tell the kids to do two things:

"Take down the serial number of their bicycle and keep it, and lock the rear wheel to the stays of the bike so that there won't be so many stolen."

Austrians Asked to Save Democracy

Vienna, Austria, Aug. 31 (U.P.)—Foreign Minister Karl Gruber called on the Austrian people today to preserve the democratic constitution in the face of "blackmail threats against the Parliament and the government."

"There must be no compromise between a democratic constitution and a Communist dictatorship," he said.

In a 10,000-word political treatise published on the day Austria's next-door neighbor Hungary was electing a new Parliament, Gruber said that Austria was willing to trade with her neighbors provided that this dealing was "not a political cover unacceptable to Austrian democracy."

At the same time, however, Austria must not try to force her conception of democracy on other Danube nations, he warned.

Gruber's article was published in the central organ of the Peoples Party, Wiener Tageszeitung. He is a leader of the party which was the Christian Socialist or Catholic group.

His remarks coincided with a report issued yesterday by a high member of the Austrian cabinet that 52 Communist mayors, although defeated in elections, were holding office in the Russian zone through Soviet pressure.

The cabinet source said that "due to Soviet pressure, the Austrian political police is dominantly Communist and must be considered a servant of the Soviet element, not a servant of the state."

The Austrian people, the foreign minister added, consider as "naive" the efforts of intellectually disguised Communists to persuade them to improve the nation by abandoning the present constitutional policy.

The foreign minister called big-power interference in small-power governments "a full-fledged violation of the right of self-determination."

"It would be better to annex such nations formally than to carry on this policy," he said.

Coal Output Increases in German Ruhr

Berlin, Aug. 31 (U.P.)—Gen. Lucius D. Clay reported to the War Department today that coal production in the German Ruhr had reached a new high for the occupation and that for the first time in five months it had been possible to authorize the full bread ration of 10,000 grams (22 pounds) in the United States-United Kingdom (British) zones.

"The improvement is due to the accelerated arrival of bread grains and flour, which during the last three months has been exceedingly heavy," Clay reported.

He pointed out that the cost was nearly 39 million dollars in the first half of August alone. This expense is split equally between American and British taxpayers.

Coal production in the Ruhr was around 240,000 tons a day, he reported, attributing the increase to "the newly instituted incentive plan" under which German miners get food bonuses for digging a certain amount of coal.

Clay also announced that Maj. Gen. George P. Hays, wartime commander of the Army's only mountain division, has been named deputy American military governor in Germany.

Hays replaced Maj. Gen. Frank A. Keating, now en route to the United States to take over first service command headquarters at Boston.

American, German and Ruksian quarters today discredited a Hamburg radio report stating that former Field Marshal Friedrich von Paulus, captured with his German army at Stalingrad, had returned to Germany to head a political movement for the Russians, the Associated Press said.

[The Hamburg radio said it obtained this information from the American-licensed newspaper Tagesspiegel in Berlin. The editors of Tagesspiegel denied they had ever issued such news. The official Soviet news bureau here said the report was "absolutely without foundation."]

Oldest Synagogue Dedicated in R. I. As U. S. Monument

Newport, R. I., Aug. 31 (AP).—Touro Synagogue, America's oldest Jewish house of worship, was dedicated as a national monument today with a plea by House Speaker Martin (R., Mass.) for religious harmony to keep "our land strong and happy—and worthy of leading other nations in the noble search for a better world."

President described the dedication as "symbolic of our tradition of freedom."

Jeshuat-Israel congregation was founded in 1658, and the present synagogue was dedicated in 1763.

Dr. Francis S. Ronalds, regional director of the National Park Service, United States Department of the Interior, unveiled the tablet.

Other speakers included United States Senator Green (D., R. I.) and Gov. John O. Pastore.

New York, Aug. 31 (INS).—Prof. Van R. Potter of the McArdle Memorial Laboratory for Cancer Research, University of Wisconsin Medical School, was announced today as the winner of the $1000 Paul-Lewis Laboratories award in enzyme chemistry.

Potter will receive the award at the 112th national meeting of the American Chemical Society, to be held in New York September 15 to 19.

Gurney Backs Truman Plea For Training

By the United Press

President Truman's latest appeal for a universal training act received tacit support yesterday from Chairman Chan Gurney of the Senate Armed Services Committee who said the nation is shockingly weak in military manpower.

At the same time Sen. Olin D. Johnston, (D., S. C.), veteran of World War I, said in an interview that he favors a modified training program of perhaps six months. But he specified that it should not interfere with the normal schooling of youths. He said the training could be divided into two or three month periods and at least a part of the program administered through schools and colleges.

Devers Joins In Warning

Gurney, North Dakota Republican, set forth his views in an article in the "Reserve Officer." He termed it "dangerously unwise to shut our eyes to the possibility of war" and maintained that, if war occurred, it would come with such speed that ground, air and naval forces would have to be trained in advance, "if at all."

A similar warning was issued at Lincoln, Nebr., by Jacob L. Devers, commanding general of the Army Ground Forces. Speaking at veterans' day ceremonies, he disclosed that an undermanned National Guard and organized reserve are the only forces immediately available to defend the Nation against surprise attack.

United States Poorly Defended

Devers said the bulk of the Regular Army is on occupation duty overseas, leaving only two divisions and one regimental combat team in the United States.

Gurney urged that World War II veterans in various reserve components organize into lobbying groups behind the President's UMT program.

He said the Nation cannot hope to "prevent" a surprise attack in any future war and must be prepared.

Gen. Chen Flies to Manchuria As China Acts to Regain Area

Nanking, Aug. 31 (AP).—Gen. Chen Cheng was en route by air today to Mukden to take over the government command in Manchuria as the Kuomintang (government party) executive committee urged "serious negotiations" with Russia to recover all of that huge territory for China.

The negotiation proposal was included in "an outline for Kuomintang reconstruction," which called for a purge of "disloyal" party members, improved discipline and revival of "the revolutionary spirit."

Russia has special treaty rights in Manchuria, which is technically under Chinese government sovereignty but which is largely occupied by Chinese Communists.

Chen, known to foreigners as "an honest general," told a conference of officials before leaving Nanking that he had found much evidence of corruption among army officers in Manchuria and that he intended severe punishment for all offenders.

Observers said thousands of Manchurians had been alinated by ruthless actions of government officers and troops, particularly in food seizures.

Something of the nature of his manifold problems was disclosed, in a statement he issued today.

Declaring that ammunition was being expended too rapidly, he said, "I don't expect every shot to hit the target, but I expect at least one hit from every hundred shots."

Experts See Little Effect Of British Action Here

By The Associated Press

Government agricultural experts said last night they saw little indication that the recess in British food buying in this country would have any material effect on prices here.

Britain got less than one million tons of grains in the United States last year a nd about 50,000 tons of meat.

Grass Out as Food, British Minister Says

Dundee, Scotland, Aug. 31 (AP).—Times are tough, but there is no possibility that Britons will have to eat grass, Food Minister John Strachey said tonight.

He referred to a statement by Prof. J. D. Bernal of London University that "we have go tto work out how to turn a large amount of grass into human food."

"The suggestion of our having to eat grass is nonsense," the Food Minister declared.

ments had their share of the tourist visitors.

As a park policeman expressed it, yesterday seemed to be an average Sunday, with an average number of people out and around, but things seemed quieter than usual.

For today, which would see the return of thousands from the country and the beach resorts, the weatherman predicted considerable cloudiness and cooler temperatures, with a maximum of about 82 degrees, in the Washington area.

The Labor Day weekend in the rest of the Nation brought comfortable temperatures to the Great Lakes region, the northern and central plains States, cooler weather in the northern Rocky Mountain section, and a warm spell southward from Kansas and Missouri.

Showers came to Illinois and Indiana yesterday. Most regions would have a Labor Day duplication of their Sunday temperatures, the W ather Bureau said.

Soviet Sends New Jap Treaty Note

Moscow, Aug. 31 (AP).—Tass reported today that the Soviet Union had sent the United States a new note insisting upon preliminary four-power discussion before any conference was called to draft a peace treaty with Japan.

The official Russian news agency said the note was delivered to the Russian Embassy in Washington last Friday Tass said the foreign ministry contended that under the 1945 agreements of Potsdam and Moscow jurisdiction over the treaty with Japan lay with the Foreign Ministers of Russia, the United States, Britain and China.

Test on Tsaldaris Delayed in Greece

Wate for Opening Of Parliament Deferred 5 Days

Athens, Aug. 31 (AP).—The shaky right-wing government headed by Premier Constantin Tsaldaris was assured today of at least five days of life—the opening of Parliament was postponed until Thursday.

Opposition party leaders started a series of conferences to consider Tsaldaris' invitation to broaden the cabinet, as favored by the United States. The conferences included Sophocles Venizelos, Panayotis Kanellopoulos, George Papandreou, Stylianos Gonatas and Apostolos Alexandris.

With the opposition lined up solidly against him, Tsaldaris would be defeated if he asked Parliament for a vote of confidence. However, it is not believed this showdown will be forced because Tsaldaris' failure to maintain a government would compel King Paul I to give a mandate to Themistocles Sophoulis, leader of the largest minority party.

Sophoulis Lacks Support

There is no strong sentiment for Sophoulis among opposition leaders, and it is accepted that he could not get a vote of confidence with the present division of party strength.

An official announcement said that Loy W. Henderson, United States State Department representative, who came here last week, would not see Greek political leaders individually. Shortly before he returns to the United States in about 10 days he may meet the politicians collectively to explain further the American policy.

[International News Service reported that it learned the United States will warn Greek political leaders that it may be forced to suspend the stop-communism aid program and quit Greece unless they unite to forestall repetition of last week's cabinet crisis.

[Greek leaders will be informed the United States may have to revise its strategic concept of the Greek position in the Mediterranean if the country develops into a political liability.

Agreement Seen Possible

[An unimpeachable source revealed that Henderson will frame his appeal for political unity and warning in the strongest possible terms when he sees King Paul and party leaders beginning tomorrow.]

There is a strong possibility Tsaldaris may reach agreement with the opposition. Gen. Napoleon Zervas, whose Ministry of Public Order in the previous cabinet was an issue leading to the fall of the government, is now out. Another chief issue is the Ministry of War, and there is some hope for compromise on this point.

Last night the new cabinet banned the publication of all information and comment on military operations by both government forces and the guerillas.

[A Communist pamphlet dispatched to government authorities in Larissa said the north Greece Communist government already has been formed with Niko Zachariades as president, Athens newspapers reported today, according to the United Press.

Defense Council Meets

[Zachariades, who fled Athens when a warrant was issued for his arrest, is leader of the Greek Communist Party. The Communist newspaper Rizopastis was the only Athens publication which did not carry the story.

[The circular said guerilla chieftain Markos Vafaides was war minister; Miltiade Prophroyenis, foreign minister, and George Ioannides, minister of the interior. It said official announcement of the government would be made when American troops arrived in Greece, the Athens papers reported.

[The government's supreme defense council met at 11 a. m. today. Less than two hours later press reports from Kozani said 300 heavily armed guerillas attacked nearby Katafygion, setting fire to 50 homes. The reports said 20 guerillas were killed or injured. One corporal was killed and four soldiers were wounded.]

Minnesotan Heads Legion Auxiliary

MRS. RUTH HUTTON

New York, Aug. 31 (AP).—The American Legion auxiliary today elected Mrs. Ruth Hutton of Excelsior, Minn., national president and adopted a resolution asking a special session of Congress to provide "universal military training as a basis for creating reserves of trained manpower."

The auxiliary elected seven other national officers and passed 29 resolutions in the final session of its twenty-seventh annual convention.

Mrs. Hutton, who was unopposed, succeeds Mrs. Norton H. Pearl of Detroit. In accepting office, Mrs. Hutton said she foresaw a "dark future," declaring:

"The year ahead will present new problems. Peace has not yet been made and the Allies, united in war, are divided in peace."

Will Continue Welfare

She pledged continuance of Auxiliary efforts for rehabilitation, child care, national defense, Americanism and community service.

Other national officers elected unanimously were Mrs. J. J. Jerabek of Algoma, Wis., vice president, central division; Mrs. John A. Lakeman, jr., West Springfield, Mass., vice president, eastern division; Mrs. Franklin Bowersox, Freemont, Nebr., vice president, northwestern division; Mrs. John B. Kirkpatrick, Eustis, Fla., vice president, southern division, and Mrs. W. B. Dingle, Dayton, Wash., vice president, western division. Mrs. M. Myrton Skelley of Des Moines, Iowa., was named chaplain and Mrs. Carl Zeller of Gibsonburg, Ohio, historian.

$10,000 For Children

Among the resolutions passed were:

That $10,000 be contributed to the Legion for aid to needy children of veterans of both world wars.

That $25,000 be given the Legion for its rehabilitation program.

That the Auxiliary, "realizing movies and radio as important forces in molding the minds of receptive youth," encourage radio networks and motion picture firms to "present more and better radio programs and pictures" to perpetuate the ideals and principles of Americanism.

Hindu, Moslem Leaders Seek To End Riots

Lahore, Pakistan, Aug. 31 (AP).—Prime Ministers Jawaharlal Nehru, of India, and Liaquat Ali Khan, of Pakistan, are making a joint 1000-mile tour by plane and automobile in an attempt to restore peace in the Punjab, where communal riots have approached civil war proportions.

Tens of thousands of refugees fleeing for their lives to concentration points from which they hope to reach friendly territory, made a pitiful sight for the two Prime Ministers. The refugees' plight was made worse by heavy rains.

The official trip coincided with fresh reports of slaughter in rural areas of both India and Pakistan. Military observers reported that fresh columns of smoke were observed from villages burned by the rioters. Bodies were seen lying in fields.

Rioters Face Death

New Delhi, India, Aug. 31 (U.P.).—Gen. Sir Frank Messervy, commander in chief of the Pakistan army, ordered his men today to shoot to kill if necessary against Hindu-Moslem rioters in the new Moslem dominion.

Drought Sears Grain, Potato Crops in Europe

London, Aug. 31 (AP).—Europe's worst drought in decades kept its grip on much of the continent today, withering grain and potato crops.

In Germany United States military government experts said the situation "is bad, but we don't know just how bad yet." A Danish Agriculture Ministry official reported an "immense disaster." Austrians halved their early forecast of a 1,700,000-ton potato crop.

A good rainfall in France last week arrived too late to do much good for wheat, and another cut in the bread ration was announced.

The Danube ebbed to its lowest in 179 years.

jority report, quickly adopted after defeat of the minority proposals for the bill, called for ejection of all nonveterans from public housing projects with apartments to be turned over to former servicemen.

Priority for veterans in all future public housing projects also was urged.

The Foreign Relations Committee report, which not only denounced communism but also gave full support to the Truman Administration's program for aid to Europe, was adopted with no dissenting "noes" heard after a minority report had been rejected on a voice vote.

The report specifically approved the Marshall plan, backed "our active policy in the Balkans," and strongly approved the Truman doctrine of aid to Greece and Turkey.

It also urged the cutting off of potential war supplies and goods from "any nation threatening the peace of the world."

The report, prepared after consultation by the Legion committee with Assistant Secretary of State Robert Lovett in Washington, provoked a brief floor skirmish.

United States Senator George Malone (R., Nev.) presented a minority report but the majority findings were adopted unanimously after they had been supported in a loudly applauded address by former Gov. Harold Stassen of Minnesota, an avowed Republican presidential candidate.

Hits "Communist Plan"

Stassen, a member of the Minnesota delegation, brought a hush to the hubbub on the convention floor when he arose to support the majority report.

"There are two plans for Europe," he asserted. "One is the Marshall Plan. The other is the Communist plan. If you oppose the Marshall Plan for European recovery, then you will give comfort and aid to the Communist plan.

"Unless America shows it is not miserly and follows through in selves,' communism will prevail." selves,' Communism will prevail."

The minority report which Malone presented declared that "the first consideration is to properly safeguard the credit and economic integrity of the United States."

The adopted majority report declared "we cannot ignore the fact that the Communists are actively hindering European rehabilitation for the very purpose of creating chaos."

If the European nations which the Marshall Plan seeks to rehabilitate should collapse, "the Red tide would pour through to the Atlantic," the committee said.

The resolution on Greece and Turkey said, "If the Soviets should swallow" these two nations, "they would control the Near East and the Mediterranean Sea, with their submarine bases, air bases and tremendous stores of oil and other vital supplies."

The delegates loudly applauded a section of the committee's report stating "persistent use" of the veto power by Russia was "destroying the ability of the United Nations to prevent war."

The report recommended that the United States undertake a world-wide campaign of "enlightenment" to make clear "to the peoples of other nations the democratic aims of American foreign policy and the advantages of the American way of life."

The resolution on outlawing the Communist Party was introduced by the New York delegation. It also recommended that membership in the party or adherence to Communist doctrine "shall render any person ineligible for office or employment in any Federal office or agency."

The convention also adopted a resolution submitted by the Wisconsin delegation which would prevent use of constitutional guarantees in the Bill of Rights as a defense by alleged subversives charged with attempting to overthrow the Government by force.

Alter Membership Oath

The resolution put the legion on record as favoring adoption of the following constitutional amendment:

"No guarantee of freedom of speech, freedom of the press, freedom of assembly, or freedom of elections, by this Constitution or by the constitution of any State, shall constitute a valid defense in court to a charge of promoting the overthrow of the Government of the United States by force."

With respect to alleged subversive aliens, the resolution asserted, "They are mere guests in this country and have no absolute right to civil privileges."

In another move aimed at subversive organizations, the Legion altered its oath of membership to include a statement that applicant was not a member of such a group.

Other adopted recommendations of the Americanism Committee called for establishment of a training school for Legionnaires to teach them methods of fighting communism, commended President Truman's program "to purge Communists from our military forces and Government positions," commended the Federal Bureau of Investigation for its "fine work" in exposing subversive activities and urged Americans to "scrutinize carefully" organizatoins they plan to join lest they become unwitting members of Communist-Front groups.

Resolutions on admission of displaced persons to the United States were offered from the floor but were referred to the Americanism Committee for further study.

The motion on the referral said, however, that "the American Legion is unalterably opposed to any change in the immigration quota including displaced persons or refugees."

The convention turned down by a 2-to-1 margin a move to put the Legion behind a campaign for regular Federal pensions for all honorably discharged veterans when they become 60 years old.

Basil O'Connor, National Red Cross president and only speaker at the concluding session, said the world "has not improved very much" in the past year and added "there is no peace—there is only the absence of a major armed conflict."

Alarms of war will continue to disturb the world until a system of control of mass destructive weapons has been devised that will be agreeable to all nations," he added.

O'Neil, who saw service in both World Wars, succeeds Paul H. Griffith of Uniontown, Pa.

The three other nominees were S. Perry Brown of Beaumont, Tex.; Joseph J. Malloy, Washington, D. C., and Martin V. Coffey, Middletown, Ohio.

The roll call in the voting had reached New York when Brown addressed the delegates and called on his own group from Texas to support O'Neil. He was followed immediately by the other two nominees in urging the unanimous election.

In World War I O'Neil spent 19 months in France as an infantryman and in the last war saw duty with both the Army and Navy on several secret intelligence missions.

He served in the Pacific in 1945 as a special assistant to John L. Sullivan, then Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Air and recently named Secretary of the Navy. O'Neil was present when Japan was occupied.

After the war he became a reporter on the Manchester Mirror and in 1925 joined the staff of the Manchester Union and Leader.

He has served in numerous Federal, State and city offices and has long been active in American Legion affairs.

Broken Leg Proves Fatal to Traffic Victim

District traffic deaths this year . 48
Deaths this date last year 41
Total traffic deaths last year 72

The unexpected death yesterday morning of a 36-year-old pedestrian whose only apparent traffic injury Thursday morning was a broken leg was officially recorded last night as a traffic fatality.

Deputy Coroner Christopher J. Murphy declared the victim, Vaughn Doggett, 36, of 916½ Liberty st. sw., died from "complications resulting from the fracture to his right leg."

Following Murphy's autopsy yesterday afternoon, police placed a technical charge of manslaughter, pending coroner's action, against the driver of the automobile, Calvin H. Campbell, 16, of 4502 Wilson blvd., Arlington, Va.

Police said Doggett was crossing Maine ave. from the west to the east side at Eye st. sw., when he was struck by Campbell's car, going northwest on Maine ave. His injury was described at "not serious" when he was admitted to the hospital.

In an early morning accident yesterday a District taxicab driver was thrown from his vehicle when it struck the curbing of a streetcar safety island. The cab continued on to strike a stone wall siding 604 Rhode Island ave. ne.

The hacker, Charles T. Bowles, 25, of 515 Alabama ave. se., was treated and released at Casualty Hospital for multiple abrasions of the body. Neither the cab nor the concrete wall was badly damaged, police said.

They charged Bowles with failure to give full time and attention to his driving.

At 1:15 p. m., yesterday, George E. Doolittle, 78, of 1006 10th st. ne., was struck by an automobile while crossing K st. near 10th st. ne. Because of his age his condition was described as undetermined at Sibley Hospital, where he was admitted under the care of his personal physician.

He suffered knee injuries, abrasions of his left elbow and a simple fracture of the middle finger.

Police charged the driver, Wallace L. Cone, 39, of 77 L st. ne., with failure to yield the right of way to a pedestrian.

Dutch Launch 2-Prong Attack On Town, Indonesians Report

Batavia, Java, Aug. 31 (U.P.).—The indonesian Republic reported tonight that the Dutch were making a two-pronged attack on the town of Soekaradja, near the north coast of central Java, and that a fierce fight was in progress.

Dutch forces attacked the town from the air, a Republican communique broadcast from radio Jogjakarta said, while ground troops moved on it from north and northeast.

Soekaradja is 50 miles from Jogjakarta.

It was indicated that the action, which the Republicans described as a big attack, was one which the Dutch would call a policing action, as the town is inside the territory which the Netherlands forces hold.

The Republicans said that one Dutch force attacked Soekaradja directly from the north, through the town of Weleri, while another moved down a branch highway from the northeast.

A Dutch communique said that Netherlands forces had been ordered to step up patrol activities in Dutch-occupied areas of Java and Sumatra because of continued Republican infiltration and sabotage.

Division Urged For Holy Land

decided upon the sacred character of the holy places be preserved, with access insured in accord with existing rights.

4. That the U. N. Assembly undertake immediately the initiation and execution of an international arrangement whereby the problem of the distressed 250,000 European Jews in assembly centers will be dealt with as a matter of extreme urgency.

U. S. Position Unknown

The report now goes to the 55 member countries for their study before the Assembly meets. The Assembly can only recommend a solution and has no power to force any nation to accept its decisions.

The United States position in the forthcoming fight is not known but it was recalled that President Truman is on record for the prompt admission of 100,000 Jews to Palestine and for a Jewish state in an "adequate area" of Palestine.

Azzam Pasha said that the committee majority recommendations left no important town to the Arabs and no port. He said the committee had worked long and hard but had "failed completely to help in a solution."

The Arabs of Palestine had nothing to do with the committee during its tour of the Holy Land but the views of the Arab states were given to the committee by Hamid Frangie, Foreign Minister of Lebanon.

The minority position also was certain to be opposed by the Arabs.

Australians Aloof

A minority recommendation supported by India, Iran and Yugoslavia proposed establishment of a joint Arab-Jewish state under a federal government.

The federal scheme would permit Jewish immigration up to the country's absorptive capacities and by implication it would limit it to the achievement of parity between Arabs and Jews.

Australia, the eleventh member of the committee, took part in drawing up both the partition and the federation plans, but in the completed report expressed support for neither.

The majority also suggested that during the two-year transition period the land transfer restrictions in the area of the future Jewish state be suspended. It called for the economics of the two states to be closely integrated, with a customs union, a common currency and joint control of public utilities throughout the country.

Favors Economic Board

The majority also favored a joint economic board which would control nearly all aspects of Palestinian economy as well as the ports of Haifa and Jaffa, both contained within the proposed Jewish state.

Geographically, both states would have three divisions, with two points of intersections, permitting uninterrupted contact between all parts of the two states.

The Jews would be allotted eastern Galilee, the central coastal plain, including Haifa, Jaffa and Tel Aviv, and the Beersheba subdistrict, including most of the Negeb.

The Arabs would receive western Galilee, the hill country of Samaria and Judea, excluding Jerusalem, and a coastal strip in the south from Isdud to the Egyptian frontier.

Many Recent Clashes

The autonomous area of Jerusalem would become a United Nations trusteeship, under a governor appointed by the U. N. who would be neither Jew nor Arab.

Under the committee plan both the Arab and Jewish states would give guarantees for the protection of racial and religious minorities and maintenance of the human rights provision of the U. N. Charter.

Arab spokesmen before the special U. N. Assembly last spring, which set up the commission and inquiry, contended that Arab and Jew had lived side by side for centuries and could get along now.

The Arab spokesmen demanded that the British stop Jewish immigration into Palestine, where the Arabs at present have a preponderant majority.

There have been numerous Arab and Jewish clashes recently.

The common ground on which all delegations, including Australia, had agreed, included eleven unanimous recommendations.

A twelfth "common ground" recommendation, declaring that a solution of the Palestine problem "cannot be regarded" as a solution of the Jewish problem in general, was supported by all delegations except Guatemala and Uruguay.

The Iraq delegation, one of the most vociferous advocates of an independent Arab Palestine, is en route to New York for the Assembly meeting, and the Jewish Agency is laying down its lines for the battle.

The British have insisted that the whole problem of the future of Palestine must be discussed. The British have indicated that they are ready to leave Palestine as soon as the U. N. or any agency named by the U. N. is ready to take over.

Both Express Surprise

Jerusalem, Aug. 31.—Both Jews and Arabs expressed profound surprise late tonight when the U. N. committee on Palestine's boundaries between the proposed Arab-Jewish states became known.

Both communities believed UNSCOP committed serious injustices. The Arabs were astounded that Jaa, biggest Arab town in Palestine, center of Arab press and Arab nationalism, should be given to the Jewish state. Jews were aggrieved that Naharian, a prosperous German-Jewish colony in northwest Palestine, should be ceded to the Arabs, along with all of western Galilee.

British circles said the whole plan was "totally unacceptable."

Union Leaders Set Campaign

candidates, while chiefs of the big independent railroad brotherhoods called for labor unity to defeat those responsible for passing "this vicious law."

Citing "propaganda with which the worker is being bombarded," Bunting said the average wage earner should realize that wages and prices are inevitably linked together and that a race between the two is futile."

"One man's income is another man's costs," he said. "Wages are costs and not income when it comes to determining prices . . . Labor costs add up to something like 75 to 85 per cent of all costs upon which consumer prices, as a whole, must be based."

He said that while the cost of living has jumped 57 per cent since 1939 the worker's actual buying power—his "real wages"—is "substantially higher" than it was eight years ago. For example, he said, the head of a family of four who averaged $23.86 per week in 1939 now earns $48.47 a week.

Schwellenbach Defends Unions

Schwellenbach said he resented the "inaccurate and unfair" attempts by those who succeeded in killing the price-control law to "force the people to believe that labor unions exclusively are responsible for price increases."

"I know that they must shudder when they see the monthly reports showing how prices are increasing," he said. "But they should not be permitted to justify their dismay by attempting to shift responsibility entirely to the organized workers of America."

He offered as a "simple answer to their protests" the fact that the cost of manufactured goods has increased only 48 per cent in comparison with a 72 per cent jump in food costs. Manufacturing industries are highly organized but few of the people who grow or process food are union members, he added.

Part of the blame for high prices, he continued, rests with the "phenomenal increase in profits during the first half of this year."

He conceded industry's right to set aside profits for future needs, but he said wage earners should fare equally instead of being forced to "dip into their savings and let the future take care of itself."

Bunting did not refer to labor's campaign to repeal the Taft-Hartley law and Schwellenbach's only reference to the statute was a statement that the Administration has acted "quickly and sincerely, to insure a (fair) trial."

Labor Day Messages

Mr. Truman, in his Labor Day message, Saturday, omitted specific reference to the new labor law which became fully effective nine days ago despite his veto. But he said that "good labor relations cannot be brought about by legislation."

Train Wreck in Potomac Freight Yards

TRIPLE DERAILMENT—Three freight cars were derailed and another completely overturned in a switch mishap in the Potomac Yards yesterday. A switchtender, Charles Hilton, left his shack less than a minute before the mishap. His shack was completely demolished in the crash of cars

Two Rail Cars Crush Shanty Workman Left Moment Before

A 65-year-old Groveton (Va.) switchman escaped possible death in the Alexandria Potomac Yards yesterday when two cars of an incoming freight train toppled over on the tracks near him.

The incoming Pennsylvania Railroad freight train from Harrisburg, Pa., was passing a hand-thrown switch at 12:37 p. m. when the loaded cars overturned, delaying trains of five railroads for several hours.

C. E. McCarty, yard superintendent, said the cause of the accident had not been determined.

The toppling cars tore down a pole supporting heavily charged electric lines and their feeder lines for electric engines—and flattened the switchman's shanty.

The switchman, Charles Helton, who has worked in the yards since April, 1909, had just stepped out a few moments before to signal the incoming train as to which track it was to take.

"I stepped to the other side of the track to be on the side the engineer was on," he said, "and the next thing there was a crash."

Ecuador's Mancheno Moves To Quell Revolts in Two Cities

not in time to attend the emergency session of the cabinet.

Quito remained calm, but Mancheno ordered all passenger traffic suspended on the railroads to facilitate immediate movement of troops and arms on the line leading to Riobamba. Tanks, jeeps and other weapons which Ecuador got from the United States by Lend-Lease, were loaded on flat cars.

Troops banned entrance to telegraph offices, and bus and street car services were suspended in the city. Controls were set up at road points and all vehicles were haulted by soldiers.

Troops and police seized the plants of the daily newspapers El Debate and La Patria. Both had supported the Conservative Party, which backed Velasco Ibarra. The officer in charge of newspaper seizures said he had orders from Minister of the Interior Julio Moreno Espinoza to see they did not publish.

One report from Riobamba said the army garrison there under Capt. Jorge Lopez Valdivieso, had joined the revolt. He was commander of the constabulary at Riobamba until Velasco Ibarra was overthrown.

Another report from Riobamba said the rebels had seized Comdr. Eduardo Mancheno, brother of President Mancheno.

Qavam Declines Iran Premiership

Tehran, Iran, Aug. 31 (U.P.).—Outgoing Premier Ahmad Qavam has informed the Shah he would not accept the premiership voted him yesterday by the Iranian Parliament, Qavam's party newspaper reported today.

The newspaper said Qavam felt he should not head a new government because deputies from Azerbaijan, the former Soviet-dominated province in the north, voted against him.

Diplomatic circles believed Qavam refused the post either to escape responsibility for any oil concessions granted to Russia or that he was maneuvering for greater mass support.

Labor Day Message

In our opinion the President's Labor Day message should not be interpreted as a veiled attack on the Taft-Hartley Labor Act. For every straight-thinking American will agree that "good labor relations cannot be brought about by legislation. They are created by the men and women concerned, cooperating sincerely and earnestly within the framework of a minimum amount of regulatory law." There is no disputing this basic truth, even though violent differences of opinion exist regarding the required scope and nature of those minimum regulatory requirements.

Certainly collective bargaining cannot work effectively or insure industrial peace unless labor and management recognize a joint responsibility to settle disputes around the conference table instead of relying upon strikes, lockouts, or other forms of coercion to gain their ends. Moreover, the responsibility of the parties engaged in collective bargaining is not limited to the issues of immediate concern. The terms of settlement must, as the President says, reflect "a spirit of honest concern for the welfare of all the people." The failure of many unions and employer groups to recognize this paramount obligation not to exploit the public has been a major cause of growing public resentment resulting in demands for tighter legislative restrictions. Hence the President has taken this opportunity to remind labor that the best safeguard against subjection to governmental restrictions lies in pursuit of an enlightened policy that takes account of the rights of all the people.

While stressing the importance to organized labor of responsible administration of union affairs the President recognizes that the Government has a special obligation to improve the condition of millions of unorganized workers and to extend the benefits of social insurance. He again urges prompt legislative action to increase minimum wage rates, broaden social insurance coverage, and establish an adequate system of health insurance. Republican leaders of the present Congress have already announced their intention of dealing with these problems at the next regular session. Indeed, shortly before adjournment, the Senate passed a resolution authorizing a comprehensive investigation of the social security program—a proceeding calculated to stimulate legislative action by the House in which social security legislation must originate. Consequently, the President's recommendations cannot be dismissed as a partisan appeal for labor support addressed to an unreceptive Congress.

As we interpret it, therefore, the President's message is not a political attack on the framers of the labor law that he rejected, but a statesmanlike document offering sound advice for the future guidance of organized labor and emphasizing the obligations as well as the benefits of organization. As he says, Labor Day "should be a holiday not alone for celebration of past accomplishments, but for dedication to the future, and to the hope which that future holds for mankind."

Alaska Homesteads

In opening land along the Alaska highway for homesteading, the Department of the Interior has done well not to oversell the advantages. The 12,000 acres bordering the Alaska end of the highway, which have been made available in five-acre plots to veterans and other would-be settlers, are not suitable for farming. As the department says, "the soil is too thin, the ground too wet, the altitude too high and the frost too frequent." The chief value of the land, according to the department, is in its mineral and timber resources. In other words, all potential takers should be abundantly aware that the climate is rigorous, that city conveniences are lacking and that the new homesteads are no place for triflers.

A principal factor in the future development of Alaska is the need to build solidly with persons who understand conditions there and do not expect the impossible. Within this framework, Alaska drastically needs people. The Alaska highway, over which regular service is now maintained, offers an artery that will prove of increasing value, not only as a vehicle for tourists, but also for transporting more economically the goods Alaska requires and the products she furnishes. Indeed, some of the new homesteads may well center around the highway itself. As traffic develops, there will have to be gas stations and lodges along both the Alaskan and Canadian sections of the road. Incidentally, Canada is now building connecting highways to make the lower entrance of the road more accessible.

Additional residents for Alaska who go in realistically will mean an infusion of new life into the Territory. This in turn may mean the opening under proper regulation of many more of the resources in which Alaska abounds and which in turn will help sustain a larger population. One such development which gives considerable promise is the use of the Tongass National Forest for the newsprint industry. With a spirt of adventure and no illusions, there is no reason why a new generation of pioneers should not make Alaska into the treasure house that all the atlases say it is.

A Realistic Approach

The decision of the British and Americans to put into effect without further delay their plan for raising the level of production in their combined occupation zones is a first step toward making western Germany economically self-sufficient and enabling it to again become an integral part of the European economic system. French fears that a revived Germany may again become a menace to her neighbors have not yet been overcome, but promulgation of the plan indicates that French opposition has at least weakened in face of economic realities.

Western Europe is in desperate need of coal and the Ruhr is the main source of supply, now that Britain no longer is in a position to export coal to the Continent. Germany, too, must have more coal for her own use, if she is to produce manufactured goods for export and make a major contribution to the economic rehabilitation of Europe as a whole. Coal, therefore, is, as we have repeatedly said, Europe's No. 1 requirement. Nor do we think the future peace of Europe is endangered by the proposed increases in the productive capacities of such key industries as steel, machinery and chemicals, designed to raise production to levels approximating those of 1936. Indeed, the tripartite communique announcing the intention to introduce the new plan recognizes that the demilitarization, disarmament and democratization of Germany "remain indispensable to security" and declares that nothing will be done to impair such guaranties now or in the future.

All the new plan aims to do, in short, is to free Germany from restrictions on her productive output that have reduced her people to a condition of pauperism, imposed heavy relief burdens on the occupying powers, and indirectly hampered the economic recovery of other European countries which formerly benefited from trade with Germany. Whether the plan will succeed depends upon the methods adopted in trying to raise production to the extent deemed essential to make the country an economic asset to Europe instead of a major liability. The setting of more ambitious goals is merely preparatory to the exacting and difficult work of rehabilitation which will require a thoroughgoing reformation of the administrative methods of the zonal authorities.

Attainment of higher production goals presupposes retention of a larger amount of Germany's productive machinery and equipment for use on the spot, and a corresponding reduction in the amounts of existing equipment available for reparations. The plan will also necessitate restrictions on coal exports as an inevitable consequence of the decision to increase the output of German factories. Further talks with the French are to be had, however, on the coke and coal problems. We hope that it will be possible to work out agreements that will retain the essential collaboration of the French in the great task of rehabilitating Europe.

The new proposals belatedly recognize that the methods hitherto employed to prevent the revival of German militarism simply will not work. Impoverished, embittered people living in the heart of Europe are an ever-present menace to the peace and security of that continent. Deprived of the means to help themselves, they will contine to be a burden to others. Stripped of productive equipment by former enemies seeking reparation for past injuries, and forced to export goods needed to build up permanent export industries, they will never be able to make the substantial contributions to world recovery of which they are capable. These are inescapable facts that, but for political passions and fears, would long since have resulted in a realistic economic approach to the problem of German rehabilitation.

Where No Veto Works

The announcement by the Atomic Energy Commission of a plant which controls the release of energy from the splitting of plutonium atoms came on the same day that the Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister, Mr. Gromyko, finally rejected the plan for an international atomic control agency. Mr. Gromyko can veto world-wide agreement on atomic power. But he cannot veto scientific progress in harnessing the atom to work for mankind. While he closes his mind to what is happening at Los Alamos and raves about American attempts to establish an atomic monopoly, he rejects the one scheme that would make it feasible for all peoples to benefit from the adaptation of atomic power to peacetime industrial uses.

What the scientists have done at Los Alamos is to prove that even the explosive, man-made element, plutonium, can be compelled to yield up its energy in a controlled furnace as well as in an atomic bomb. Previous atomic furnaces have used the less explosive element, uranium, which, in the language of one writer, compares to plutonium as does wet wood in a furnace to dynamite. With the control of this more explosive atomic fuel for peacetime use, the possibilities for development of atomic power in industry stagger the imagination. We are reminded of what is probably the most pointed comment ever made on the future of atomic energy: that it would be as foolish to talk of atomic power in terms of only the atom bomb as to talk of electricity in terms of only the electric chair.

It is the application of this power to peaceful enterprise that will become the strongest argument for international control. So long as atomic materials are going only into bombs which the world knows we have no intention of using in any aggressive attack, Russia and her satellites may safely sabotage every attempt that is made to create genuine international atomic controls. But let this vast new source of power come into peacetime use in the United States and countries that are cooperating with us in its development, and even Moscow will find it difficult to hide the advantages of participating in the international atomic enterprise. As the bomb spoke louder than any propaganda during the war, "fast reactor" plants supplying power to peacetime industry will speak louder than any veto.

Riding The Tiger

The Kremlin has rejected the American appeal that it intervene to prevent execution of the death sentence passed upon Nikola Petkov by the Communist government of Bulgaria, which is now headed by Comrade Dimitrov, former secretary of Comintern. With what seems to have been a perfectly straight face, the Soviet government explained that such an intervention would be an unwarranted infringement of Bulgarian sovereignty. Thus the hope of saving Petkov from the firing squad grows fainter, although the governments of both the United States and Great Britain are making further efforts through the Allied Control Commission at Sofia.

Meanwhile, Petkov in his prison cell no doubt has had opportunity to reflect upon the nature and teleological evolution of popular fronts. Despite the instructive examples afforded by the fate of the non-Communist Left in Spain and elsewhere, Petkov, as leader of the Bulgarian Peasants Party, persuaded himself that collaboration with the Communists was not only possible but desirable. Doubtless he felt that the dangers usually inherent in such coalitions could be dismissed because of the relatively slight support the Communists were able to command among the Bulgarian people. Apparently, he had forgotten that communism depends for its victories not upon popular support but upon instruments of intimidation. When at length he discovered his mistake, and went bravely into opposition to the regime, it was far too late. By that time the Communists had control of the police, the courts and a large part of the army. Petkov was arrested and condemned on the usual accusation of Fascist conspiracy and 23 of his followers were expelled from the Bulgarian Parliament.

Of course radical and liberal politicians in other parts of the world have made much the same mistake, among whom we might mention, for old times sake, Senor Luis Companys, Senor Largo-Caballero, Leon Blum and our own Mr. Norman Thomas. Sometimes, as in the case of Senor Companys and Dr. Furlan of Yugoslavia the experiment has had fatal consequences for the experimenters, while others like M. Blum and Mr. Thomas have lived to profit by the lesson; but this seems largely a matter of fortuitous circumstances. In the latest example of Nikola Petkov, the Louisville Courier-Journal thinks there is a moral for Mr. Henry Wallace, but somehow we suspect it will be wasted upon him.

Vicious Circle

It is, we suppose, Mr. Marcus Heiman's indisputable right to close the National Theater if he chooses rather than admit Negroes, just as it is the indisputable right of a man to cut off his leg if he wants to do so. No one, however, has the right to deprive Washingtonians of all races and creeds of the drama. That is what Mr. Heiman's alternative threat to convert the National into a movie theater would accomplish. Thus if Mr. Heiman persists in his foolish defiance, the Capital will have to look elsewhere for its stage entertainment. And there is no reason to think the famine will last long. Certainly an urban area of one and a quarter million people can support another legitimate theater, or even several theaters. Indeed, a movement to launch such a project is now under way, and undoubtedly Mr. Heiman's intransigence will give it impetus.

Since the National at present enjoys a monopoly in its field, Mr. Heiman's stand cannot be based on fear of lost patronage. Very probably the National would continue to be filled no matter what the admission policy. The clew to his obstinacy is to be found in his statement that he refuses to be coerced. Apparently he fancies himself in the role of the martyr upholding the prerogatives of private property. He has asserted that the National's policy will change only when the general discriminatory pattern in Washington is altered by law and business and when civil groups relax racial restrictions.

Thus the whole matter is reduced to transparent question-begging and who-struck-John. The discrimination pattern in Washington is largely one of attitudes which it is impossible to change by law, as Mr. Heiman well knows. His own enterprise, for instance, sets the custom with respect to legitimate theater admissions. Nor is there an excuse for his barrier in the altogether deplorable fact that discrimination is also the policy with many Washington movie theaters. There is this important difference: whereas Negroes have an opportunity to see motion pictures at theaters that do admit them, they are deprived altogether of the chance to view legitimate stage productions. By his refusal to retreat from his narrow stand Mr. Heiman abdicates the leadership and sense of public responsibility which should be expected of a man in his dominant position. He has chosen weakly to go along with injustice rather than do what is well within his power to do.

Indian Citizens

The Town Hall of the Air recently attacked the time-worn question: "Has the American Indian Had a Fair Deal?" Though there was no decision given, it must have been quite apparent to the audience that the nays had it.

After the regular discussion—conducted by a Senator, a member of the Indian Bureau and two college men of Red extraction—was finished, some of my people in that Santa Fe audience, where the broadcast was held, were allowed to get up and ask questions. Some Navajos there promptly asked a few vital and pointed questions which were too difficult to be answered. They have been repeatedly asked in Congress, said the Senator, to no effect.

Why do we propagate democracy abroad and suppress it at home? Why do we give millions in Europe while on an arid Western desert in our own country, 55,000 of our own people—though of different colored skins from those who conquered them—are slowly starving to death, because we have not kept faith with them.

This Nation promised them by treaty a century ago when it took their choice lands that it would educate them, and they are still illiterate and cannot therefore live in a white man's world. Can Congress explain to the American people why it does not appropriate the necessary money for roads and schools in Navajoland and see that the money is spent for that purpose?

Though Indians are called citizens, it having been considered necessary to pass an Act of Congress in 1924 to make them so, and pay taxes like other people on what they buy, even if some are exempt from land tax, on the "reservations" where many of them live, there are States where they are not treated as people. They are still "Indians" and cannot vote. How can a man who is not a citizen of the United States be drafted in the Army? Yet there are many distinguished Red veterans who came out of the last war.

"When," asked a Sioux veteran from the Pine Ridge Reservation in South Dakota, "did a Sioux warrior ever have to be drafted to fight for his country?"

Why should there ever have been any doubt of his being a free citizen? TEKARIHOKEN.

Baltic Republics

In The Washington Post of August 28, as on various other occasions in preceding months, appeared an informative communication from Alfred Bilmanis, doctor of philosophy, and Latvian Minister to the United States since 1935.

Dr. Bilmanis continues to reside in Washington, as a safer place than his native Riga since Latvia was deprived of its independence and absorbed into the Soviet Union, along with Latvia's two neighbor republics.

I am concerned as to what the United States and the United Nations purpose doing about Soviet Russia's assumption that her nearness, manpower, and might justified her in absorbing those three independent Baltic republics, calling their occupation a domestic affair into which no other country or people has any right to inquire. Mussolini absorbed Ethiopia somewhat similarly because the old League of Nations and Britain were afraid to intervene.

What Dr. Bilmanis writes is authoritative, not the peevishness of a displaced diplomat. He is a historian, author of seven books and an authoritative contributor to the Encyclopedia Britannica. He was professor of political history and science in the Institute of Riga. He was Latvia's delegate to the League of Nations in 1930, Latvia's Minister to Moscow in 1932-35. He is a trained journalist and was a newspaper editor. He is past 60 and rather a distinguished-looking citizen of the world. Many American citizens should know conditions from displaced Europeans so competent to explain them lucidly and interestingly.

Boating Accident

Much emphasis has been placed on the reduction of traffic accidents but there has been little attention brought to the wanton waste of young lives in the Washington boating and swimming areas. Is it not possible for some control to be placed on the indiscriminate renting of canoes to young boys and girls, some of whom may not be aware of the potential danger inexperienced handling of these boats may bring?

I have recently lost a young member of my family in this way, and have learned from the harbor police that a great many young lives are lost in the Potomac every year. Still nothing has been done about it! Is it not possible to equip either boaters or canoes with life-saving equipment? Is it not possible to force boathouse owners to question carefully of each renter his ability to swim? Perhaps proof of ability to swim should be made a necessary requisite before a boat can be rented!

Education For The Marshall Plan

After nearly two years of inadequate and uncoordinated efforts to help Europe, it is at last proposed that a comprehensive plan be made for rehabilitating many European countries. Foreign countries are asked to cooperate in making a plan restoring their economies. Little is said about the planning which will be necessary here if we are to satisfy the demands which these foreign nations will make upon us for the fulfilling of their needs.

In the June 29 issue of The Washington Post, Ferdinand Kuhn tells of the failure to meet some of the British and Polish requests for goods which have already been made. He says "The British, for example, came here recently seeking 100 caterpillar tractors for use in the strip mining of coal. They had the dollars to pay for them, out of the fast dwindling balance of their American loan.

Only three American firms make these heavy duty tractors. Not one was interested in filling the British order. Appeals from the United States Government agencies produced no result. The British could not get the tractors, although their delivery and use would have added close to a million tons to Britain's faltering coal production in a full year.

"Another example came from the experience of the Polish government, which last fall got a 40-million-dollar credit from the Export-Import Bank to buy, among other things, coal cars for moving Silesian coal.

The Poles had the dollars, but were not able to buy a single coal car. The Poles estimate they could have exported 10 million tons more coal within the next 12 months . . . much of it to coal-starved western and southern Europe—if they had received the coal cars in time."

It is tragic to realize that, today, when the economic responsibility of this Nation is greater than ever before, the issues before us are being obscured by a complex against the very word "planning." It is ridiculous to speak of planned economy and free enterprise as if they were antithetical. It is all a matter of degree. Some planning is always done and some freedom is always possible. Planning by governments concerns both degree and area. What is desirable differs with circumstances of the day.

During the war, we had a greater degree of governmental planning than we were used to having. We did not glorify this degree of planning nor expect it to be permanent, but we accepted it as necessary and useful for the purpose at hand. What we accomplished under this system of planning has been called a "miracle of production." It was truly that, for in one year during the war, we supplied 85 billion dollars worth of goods for war purposes, while maintaining a high standard of living for our civilians.

Today the world is crying for our products and is in no way able to pay for them at this time with goods which we could import. From an economic viewpoint, the situation has considerable resemblance to the war period, for if we are going to meet the demands of this postwar period, we must continue for some time to export much more than we import. If we are able to do this to the degree and in the products which are desired and needed, we shall have to do some planning for producing the type of goods which other countries most need. If we do this, we may have to return to some controls or even rationing of some scarce materials in order that our civilian consumption may proceed without disastrous scarcities for our own people.

At this moment we are face to face with the need for an understanding by average Americans of a world situation which may radically affect their own purchasing power and purchasing habits. If they fail to arise to the occasion, it will be tragic for reconstruction and for the popularity of this country and of democracy. Yet they are being given no education for the understanding of the situation and no preparation for the role they may be called upon to play.

I believe that immediate steps should be taken to get some agreement between political leaders of the two parties concerning what may be the necessary steps for effectively implementing the Marshall Plan and that following such an agreement plans should be made to educate the American public concerning the sacrifices which it may be necessary for them to accept.

The Map Of Tomorrow

OUR EMERGENT CIVILIZATION: planned and edited by Ruth Nanda Anshen. (Harper, $4.50.)

Here 14 very eminent professors, assuming by turns the role of Apollonian Pythoness, give forth prophetic utterances about one aspect or another of the world that our grandchildren, or perhaps great-grandchildren, are likely to inherit. Many of these oracles are in the best Delphic tradition, full of solemn and mysterious words like "ambivalence," "organicity," "integration," "domination-analysis," "stratification," "dynamic," and so on; but the main idea seems to be that beneath the spiritual and social confusions which attend the dissolution of our culture, the character of the new Zeitgeist is perceptible. At any rate the professors strive very hard to perceive one; some of them indeed even manage to grow rather cheerful about what they contemplate. Not a great deal is said in this book about nuclear energy and the eschatological note commonly sounded in discussions of the subject is for the most part absent; but I suppose it should be observed that two thirds of the contributors are professional philosophers and presumably not displeased that the laboratory scientists, so long the objects of superstitious veneration by the multitude, should now find themselves in the predicament of the sorcerer's apprentice. What, asks the editor, Dr. Anshen, "has been the result of the bland and persistent worship of the ideals of science? Why has an inevitable decay of these ideals set in, metastasizing until the very soul of many is lost, bewildered, without hope? It is because mind has been separated from reason." That is to say, worship of reason has ended in the destruction of reason; it has become "a meaningless symbol, an allegorical figure without a function." Thus today in the fast-fading twilight of the Cartesian dispensation, politics have usurped the place of religion and power has become a substitute for love.

Professor Blanshard of Yale attributes the present disrepute of reason to three doctrines that have exerted a powerful influence on the history and temper of the age. One of these doctrines is the naturalism which supposes that thought is a mere physiological process taking place within the central nervous system; another is the Freudianism which insists that the movements of thought are controlled by subconscious and altogether irrational emotions; the third, of course, is the positivism which asserts that thinking is a mere verbal exercise having no relation to reality. If any one of these theories is true, says the professor, it is time for the philosophers to shut up shop; if they are not true, the sooner they are got rid of the better. There is, he says, "such a thing possible as a 'sentiment of rationality,' a popular trust in reason, a pride in its private exercise, a general demand that the issues between man and man, race and race, nation and nation, be settled in accordance with it"; and indeed such a sentiment has become not merely desirable but necessary.

Professor Catlin of Cornell, whose job in the present symposium was to descry the trend of world politics, seems to foresee an escape from the present "idolatry of power-lust" in a revival of the philosophia perennis, which is to say in the truths common to all great religions, and he anticipates among other things an "immense revival of Catholic Christianity." M. Maritain, however, finds that a merely "decorative Christianity" will not suffice, if religion is to defeat secularism on its own ground. "To believe in God must mean to live in such a manner that life cannot be lived if God does not exist." Professor Montague of Barnard seems to think the surest escape from atheism lies in disposing of the problem of evil by postulating a pantheistic deity, or Cosmic Mind, that "makes for righteousness," but, lacking omnipotence, has not been able to finish the job. Professor Northrop of Yale, author of The Meeting of East and West, reiterates his demand for a new philosophical synthesis based on the latest data of natural science. Professor Adams of California seems to be saying that men must somehow manage to hang on to a few absolutes while yet avoiding the dangers of fanaticism and bigotry. Professor MacIver of Columbia considers the role of social classes in a world in which the hierarchies are to be based upon function rather than birth or property; he seems to conclude, however, that the tendency toward equality of status will continue. Dr. Ananda Coomaraswamy, one of the more lucid contributors, thinks that democratic man must be rescued from the esthetic squalor that surrounds him, that ideals of beauty as well as of utility must prevail in manufacture and that human industry must provide "for the needs of the soul and body simultaneously." Modern methods of production and habits of consumption, he says, encourage fatalism, because they deny to the modern man "freedom to make moral decisions for himself or in relation to his neighbor." Professor Werner Jaeger, the author of Paideia, observes rather hopefully that after all Plato and Aristotle were also born in a time of power politics and cultural dissolution.

If all this leaves you not much the wiser about the moral topography and philosophic climate of the emerging civilization, I dare say the fault is more mine than the professors'; for to be honest I am a bit confused myself. Nevertheless, I shall leave you with Dr. Ansher's assurance that "a new concept of man has been born, a new hope for unity and fulfillment, a hope which can now lead him over the Jordan into the Promised Land."

Trade Freedom

A Communication

THE REPRESENTATIVES of 17 nations who have been conferring ever since April in Geneva in an endeavor to reach agreement on the lowering of trade tariffs, the elimination of trade discrimination and the writing of a "charter" for a world trade organization that shall include a "code" of international trade conduct, have at long last recessed from their arduous labors.

So little news has trickled through from Geneva about these ITO plans that one gains the painful impression that the conference has not even been the partial success claimed for it. Although successful in removing some of the tariff obstacles, this achievement under existing circumstances seems but an empty victory.

Britain has announced that she will continue her preferential trade arrangements with the nations of the British Commonwealth. And her Socialist experimentation during the last two years makes it crystal clear that the role of private enterprise, when hedged by an economic system that is increasingly socialized, cannot be left to work itself out as a mere residue of a nationalization program.

Then, too, Soviet Russia, conspicuously absent from the Geneva conferences, seems to have been altogether unmindful of the dollar shortage and its paralyzing effect of withering away much of the world's trade. Nevertheless the draft of the ITO charter adopted last week in Geneva will go before the World Trade Conference which is to convene in Havana, Cuba, in November at which it is expected that 57 nations will be represented.

MUCH HAS BEEN left unsaid to date about the ITO so that the American public is severely handicapped in forming a clear opinion as to its merits. However, it is apparent that the Havana meeting will be every bit as cynical, disillusioning and bewildering as the one held at Geneva. Great Britain, by her attendance, is almost as much a problem as is Soviet Russia, which has to date refused to attend these U. N.-sponsored international trade conferences.

Soviet Russia is what has come to be known as a "state monopoly country." Such countries enjoy a monopoly of foreign trade. The Commissariat of Soviet Russia conducts all of Soviet Russia's foreign trade. Soviet trading agencies in foreign lands are directly responsible to it. Hence, individual traders are eliminated. The state being the principal in all commercial transactions, the distinction between commercial treaties and contracts disappears.

The country having such a monopoly enjoys untold advantages. Thus, where the state is the direct buyer and seller there can be no charge of discrimination because the buyer or seller has always enjoyed the right to select his own market. Then, too, the state monopoly country is in a position to take effective account of the interdependence of imports and exports which is something out of question in countries where the interests of the private importer and the private exporter are separate.

THE SERIOUSNESS of this is at once apparent when one realizes that during and since the recent war Soviet Russia has actually succeeded in controlling Finland, Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania, Poland, Czechoslovakia, Romania, Yugoslavia, Bulgaria, Hungary, Austria and a large part of Germany and is now engaged in an active campaign to similarly "annex" Greece and Turkey. This is an extensive area, once highly industrialized, which used to supply the continent's coal, oil, metallurgical, chemical, textile, timber, meat, fowl and other food and raw material requirements. Needless to say, all those so-called satellites are as much state monopoly countries as is Soviet Russia.

This presents, indeed, a gloomy picture to a nation with such a deeply rooted capitalist tradition as the United States. The situation is especially aggravating because many other countries which in normal peace times were classified as "free enterprise" nations — notably Great Britain and the Scandinavian countries—have Socialist governments bent on the "nationalization" of agriculture as well as all basic industries.

Always realistic, Britain in the early days of the war set up state trading agencies in order to facilitate her trade in the Balkans and throughout the Middle East in "competition" with Nazi Germany and Soviet Russia. And there is every indication that Britain is now expanding these state trading agencies. In other words, Britain has to all intents and purposes become a state monopoly country.

A COUNTRY that is as vitally interested in trade with and among nations as the United States, enjoying an international trade (imports and exports) amounting annually to more than 20 billion dollars; that has, ever since 1939, generously given of its natural resources of iron, ore, oil, coal, copper, bauxite, wood, zinc, lead and other raw materials which figure so prominently in our total war cost of approximately 310 billion dollars; that gave the Soviet Union a war contribution of approximately 11 billion dollars; that paid 72 per cent toward the entire operation of UNRRA and otherwise contributed substantially to help feed and rehabilitate the starving peoples of devastated Europe and Asia; that loaned Great Britain with a Socialist government, $3,500,000,000, and other large loans to France and Italy, only to find itself compelled to seriously consider further loans to these and other countries fast coming within the periphery of Moscow domination; this country is certainly in no position to take anything but a dim view of developments which practically spell the doom of "free" world markets.

The conference at Havana will probably decide whether the United States will be compelled, as Great Britain has been, to set up state trading organizations in order to "compete" with the foreign trade monopolies now enjoyed by Soviet Russia and her satellites.

Matter Of Fact

Renaissance Of The Labor Board

THE NATIONAL LABOR RELATIONS BOARD, which has been to all outward appearances reduced to a wholly moribund condition by the Taft-Hartley Act, is about to spring into vigorous and surprising action. It is almost certain that the board will make in the near future as important a decision as it has made since it was created in 1935. This decision will reverse the crucial ruling on non-Communist affidavits made by the bustling new "labor czar," NLRB Counsel Robert Denham.

Denham has started a political chain reaction by interpreting the Taft-Hartley Act far more narrowly than most of its sponsors ever intended. He has ruled that all the officers of both the national labor organizations, the AFL and the CIO, must sign an affidavit swearing they are not Communists. According to the Denham ruling, unless all the national officers sign the affidavits, no member union may have recourse to the labor board. It is difficult to believe that Denham foresaw the consequences of this extreme interpretation of the new labor law.

The CIO has announced that its national officers will refuse to sign, as a matter of principle. In point of fact, at least three of the CIO officers would risk charges of perjury if they did sign. But now there is every indication that the AFL, whose officers are unanimously and fiercely anti-Communist, will also refuse to sign.

A BROAD hint to that effect has been thrown out by the AFL. It has announced that "a fundamental principle is involved," and that the decision, which will be taken at a board meeting on September 8 at Chicago, will be "a weighty one."

Denny Lewis, brother of John L., to whom he habitually refers with proper respect as "the boss," is reported to have put the matter more pithily. "The boss knows he's no lousy commie," Denny is quoted. "Everybody knows he's no commie. But he'll be damned if any one is going to make him swear he's not a commie." Whether or not the younger Lewis is accurately quoted, his brother is widely believed to feel exceedingly strong on the subject. And when John L. Lewis feels exceedingly strongly on any subject, the AFL executive council is apt to end up feeling strongly on it too. Thus the odds are high that the AFL officers will refuse as a body to sign the non-Communist affidavits.

It is perfectly evident that this would mean, if the Denham ruling were allowed to stand, the CIO and the AFL, which are in effect virtually all of American organized labor, would be completely isolated from the National Labor Relations Board.

In other words, Denham's interpretation of the Taft-Hartley Act would have led to a return to the laws of the jungle in labor-management relations. The labor board would become a mere vermiform appendix among Government agencies, enjoying a legal existence, performing no useful function.

THE BOARD has no intentions, however, of becoming a vermiform appendix. During the last month, to be sure, the board to all intents and purposes ceased to exist. Chairman Paul Herzog was ill in New York. The two new members, J. Copeland Gray and Abe Murdock, had not yet effectively taken on their jobs. Robert Denham, determined to make full use of the vast and unaccustomed powers granted him under the Taft-Hartley Act, paid scant attention to the two old members, John M. Houston and James R. Reynolds. Since Herzog's return last week, however, the board has come back to life. Almost certainly a majority and possibly all of the board members are now convinced that the Denham ruling was a foolishly overstrict interpretation of the new labor act. They are determined to reverse it.

This action by the labor board is sure to have interesting repercussions. The most obvious possibility is that it will start an enormous row between Denham and the board. The board members want no part of such a row. Moreover, to reverse his ruling will take Denham off what is visibly a most uncomfortable hook. Yet it will also constitute a severe loss of face for Denham, and he will be a most unusual public official if he accepts this loss of face with equanimity.

But the consequences of the board's decision will extend well beyond the personal relationship between the labor board and its counsel. The more sensible Republican backers of the Taft-Hartley Act have been privately horrified by the new counsel's over-zealous interpretation of the anti-Communist provisions of the act. They were horrified simply because his interpretation clearly threatened to reduce the whole relationship between Government, management and labor to a complete shambles.

This result would in turn of course be laid at the door of the Republicans, as chief architects of the new labor law. That is why one politician here recently remarked: "Denham calls himself a Republican, but he's the biggest political asset in Harry Truman's Administration." That is also why the more astute strategists on the Democratic National Committee will be far from pleased by the labor board's reversal of Denham's ruling.

A-Bomb Effect Upon Humans To Be Studied

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

A long-range study of the effects of atomic bombing upon human survivors will be undertaken at once by the Atomic Energy Commission and the National Research Council.

The survivors of attacks upon Nagasaki and Hiroshima will be the chief subjects of the study, which will highlight heredity among other things.

Heading the group named to carry on the work will be Dr. Thomas M. Rivers of the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research as chairman. Others include some of the Nation's leading authorities on radiation effects. They are:

Dr. George W. Beadle, California Institute of Technology; Dr. Detlev W. Bronk, National Research Council; Dr. Austin M. Brues, Argonne National Laboratory; Dr. George M. Lyon, chief of the Radioisotope Research Section of Veterans' Administration; Dr. Shields Warren, Harvard Medical School; Dr. Stafford L. Warren, University of California; Dr. George H. Whipple, University of Rochester, and Dr. Raymond E. Zirkle, University of Chicago.

Continues Earlier Study

The group was assigned to the study as the result of a directive by President Truman, authorizing the National Research Council "to undertake a continuing study of the medical and biological effects of the atomic bomb on man."

The job is the continuation of work started immediately after Japan's surrender. At that time a joint Army-Navy commission made extensive observations in the bombed cities. When the commisisoner's report was submitted, Maj. Gen. Norman T. Kirk, then Surgeon General of the Army, recommended a long-time study of the surviving casualties.

In December, 1946, a five-man commission of the Army, Navy and NRC visited Japan to determine methods needed for further study. As a result President Truman authorized the present operation.

Japanese to Assist

The plans include setting up in Japan a full research program headed by American doctors. Japanese scientists will participate in the work.

The investigation will study the effect of atomic radiation on the blood cells, on the physical growth of children, on the mechanisms of heredity, and on the development of various pathological conditions, including the formation of massive scar tissue, known as "keloids."

The study of Japanese survivors may yield important information on many radiation effects not now fully understood, Dr. Lewis H. Weed, chairman of NRC's Division of Medical Scienc believes.

"Widespread interest has been aroused concerning the effect of radiation on heredity," Weed reported.

Abnormalities Rouse Interest

"Much of this interest stems from erroneous statements about the frequency of abnormalities among children born in Hiroshima and Nagasaki since the bombing."

Weed emphasized there is no reliable evidence on which to base any conclusions concerning the frequency of such abnormalities. As a result, one of the major studies will be in the field of genetics or heredity.

Guiding it will be Nobel Prize Winner Dr. H. J. Muller of the University of Indiana; Dr. C. H. Danforth, Stanford University; Dr. D. R. Charles, University of Rochester; Dr. L. H. Snyder, Ohio State University; and Dr. James V. Neel, University of Michigan.

6 Pct. Interest On Veterans' Bonds Urged

By Rose McKee
International News Service Staff Writer

Senator Myers (D., Pa.) promised veterans yesterday that he will do his "utmost" in the returning Congress to boost the interest on their terminal leave bonds from 2½ to 6 per cent.

He urged the 8,900,000 former servicemen who hold $1,853,292,000 worth of the bonds, not to cash them Tuesday but to hold onto them in the hope of getting the higher interest.

President Truman and Secretary of the Treasury Snyder previously have urged all veterans who do not need the money, to refrain from converting the bonds into dollars.

Inflationary Effort Feared

Congress originally said the bonds could not be cashed for five years. However, it relented shortly before the summer recess and set the September date.

Administration leaders fear that cashing of the bonds in wholesale numbers will have an inflationary effect by sending high prices still higher.

No one knows for sure how many veterans will cash their bonds.

The Army Times estimated 72 per cent of veterans will cash their bonds immediately to pay debts, meet payments on homes or insurance, or to take care of medical expenses.

The bonds can only be cashed at banks, savings and loan associations or other financial institutions. Those cashing the bonds will be asked for positive identification, discharge papers being the best.

Banks Would Not Benefit

In promising to fight for 6 per cent interest on the bonds, the Senator said that such a rate would make the bonds the "very best investments in America."

He said he thought it "only fair" that the Government pay veterans the same rate of interest on the bonds as it pays to private citizens who have overpaid their income taxes and get refunds with 6 per cent interest.

Banks, however, will not be able to benefit from the high rate under present proposals. One member of Congress said Myers planned a clause in his bill to force banks to turn in bonds immediately to the Treasury.

German Paper Says Soviet Holds 12,000 in Camp

Berlin, Aug. 31 (AP).—Neue Zeitung, official German newspaper of the American Military Government, said today between 12,000 and 16,000 Germans, including many political prisoners, were in the Soviet internment camp at Sachsenhausen and that, in general, living conditions were hard.

The newspaper said the death rate was especially high last winter "when 30 to 35 inmates died every day."

Neue Zeitung attributed its information to "carefully checked reports from reliable sources."

Soviet authorities permitted a group of 30 Allied and German newspapermen to enter Sachsenhausen August 8 to interview prisoners, but the visitors were admitted only to the Russian headquarters building.

Elizabeth's Wedding to Be 'Austere'

London, Aug. 31 (U.P.)—Britain's economic crisis has dimmed Princess Elizabeth's hopes for a lavish wedding and a honeymoon abroad, it was reported today.

The princess was said to have agreed with her father that austerity should keynote her wedding to Lieut. Philip Mountbatten November 20 at Westminster Abbey.

King George VI reportedly has insisted that the ban on foreign travel for pleasure, including honeymoons, should apply to his daughter.

The Sunday Dispatch said King George banned all decorations at the Abbey and along the route from Buckingham Palace.

These reports followed yesterday's predawn fire at Sunninghill Park, which ruined the 25-room ivy-covered country home where Elizabeth and Philip planned to set up housekeeping after their marriage.

Investigators said the fire probably was caused by a workman's cigarette.

Plan to Admit DPs Urged On Congress

By The Associated Press

Top congressional priority next year on legislation to admit 400,000 of Europe's homeless war refugees over a four-year period was urged yesterday by the Citizen's Committee on Displaced Persons.

"Misery, hopelessness and despair take no vacation or recess," declared Earl G. Harrison, chairman of the organization.

"The displaced persons problem should top the foreign and domestic agenda in Congress when it reconvenes January 2."

"There can be no peace in the world until the displaced persons problem is settled and we can give our domestic economy a shot in the arm by integrating these valuable human beings into our agricultural and industrial pattern," he contended.

Harrison's statement was given to a reporter through the committee's Washington office.

A measure to admit the 400,000 refugees, sponsored by Representative Stratton (R., Ill.) and indorsed by the Administration, was shelved—at least temporarily—by a House Judiciary Subcommittee after extensive public hearings in the closing days of the last session.

President Truman has served notice of his intention to renew his appeal for passage of a measure to admit a proportion of the refugees.

Fleet Exercise Lists Still Open to Reserves

Billets for fleet tactical exercises scheduled October 29 through November 24 are still open to members of the Naval Reserve on inactive duty, the Navy announced yesterday.

Applications for the cruise from reservists living in the Potomac River Naval Command area should be addressed to the Commandant, P. R. N. C., Naval Gun Factory, Washington.

Prices Threat To Freedom, Senator Hints

By The Associated Press

Senator O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.) yesterday declared another depression might center all power in Washington and cost us "all freedom" but that it needn't happen.

"There is a purchasing power in the United States which is capable of keeping this country running on high for years to come," the Senator told a reporter. But he warned that "charging all the traffic will bear" can undermine it.

O'Mahoney said that a forthcoming congressional investigation of prices and the rising cost of living will prove this:

"We can prevent a depression and guarantee a long period of prosperity that will make it possible for this country to lead the world to permanent peace."

Also, he said in a broadcast over Station WEAM in Arlington:

"Full production in America is the path of peace . . . The people of America, if their productive energy can be released, can lead the whole world to a new era of peace and prosperity. Production is the goal."

Freedom here faces two perils, O'Mahoney continued—a new world war in which "freedom would disappear" and another depression.

If the latter comes, the Senator said, "with millions of unemployed, the Government would have to step in, then we might have to give all power to Washington—to the Government in Washington, and lose all freedom ourselves."

O'Mahoney declared that "some of our business leaders" are endangering production and inviting depression by charging too high prices.

"You don't need to increase prices," he said. "All that is needed for business to increase production."

Urges Tax Reform

O'Mahoney advanced this program:

1. Tax reform to provide an incentive for investment of private capital in new business. He would reduce the rate on profits made by new business.

2. Strict enforcement of the anti-trust laws "so as to prevent agreements to fix prices, or to prevent agreements which would restrict the activities of the people."

3. National standards of responsibility for organized capital and labor.

With food costs, rents and other necessities moving upward since Government price controls ended, O'Mahoney said in the interview that public interest in prices is certain to make this a major issue in next year's general elections.

"Henry Ford, 1st gave business a lesson which it had not learend," O'Mahoney said. "It was he who, by reducing prices, proved to business that the greatest profits are to be found in mass consumption."

O'Mahoney said the price hearings will stress the fact that the "future of this country lies in small-unit profits on a large consumption and that large consumption means large production."

He will serve on the subcommittee that will conduct price hearings in the Far West. Dates and cities are to be announced.

Senator Flanders (R., N. J.) will preside at price hearings in the Eastern region opening September 15 at Providence, R. I.

Representative Bender (R., Ohio) will be chairman of the Midwestern hearings which open in Cleveland September 23.

Board of Trade Plans Drive To Attract Conventions Here

The Washington Board of Trade has set out to make Washington a convention city.

An "all-out" campaign to bring convention business to the Capital has been launched by the Greater National Capital Committee of the trade board, Joseph C. McGarraghy, committee chairman, said yesterday.

Now that the war is over, McGarraghy explained, Washington can assure convention-sponsoring organizations that "sizable blocks of rooms can now be set aside for practically every period of the year, except during the Cherry Blossom season."

During 1948, the committee said, the Daughters of the American Revolution, the Chamber of Commerce of the United States and the American Physical Society again will hold their conventions here. In addition, groups which have not met here for many years, such as the International Congress of Tropical Medicine, American Trucking Associations, National Fire Protection Association and the Special Libraries Association, will hold conventions here next year.

McGarraghy said that the D. C. National Guard Armory is "another important factor in Washington's convention picture." The structure "will permit us to solicit large conventions for this city which heretofore were unable to consider Washington because of its lack of auditorium facilities. Although the Armory has only recently become available for this purpose, we have already had a number of inquiries from large convention groups concerning the future use of this building."

Rush Named Manager Of Md. U. Dining Hall

Floyd E. Rush, former manager of Hotel Washington, has been named manager of the University of Maryland dining hall at College Park, the school announced yesterday.

Rush, veteran of 30 years in the restaurant and hotel business, fills the position formerly held by the late Charles V. Delahunt. He has assumed his new duties.

District Map Being Prepared For Distribution to Visitors

Washington visitors, perplexed and often lost in the maze of District avenues and circles, may have their problems solved for them next year.

This encouraging news came yesterday from Highway Planning Engineer D. S. Brinkley, who said the District is preparing a colorful, picturesque and fully accurate city road map and guide for free distribution next January.

It will be the Municipal Government's first free "Official District Highway Map" in the city's history, Brinkley said.

The showy 27 by 32 inch guide is being designed to meet the demands which have been coming in "for years" from tourists and Chambers of Commerce in all parts of the United States, he explained.

Folded into 28 "panels," the map will make a compact and convenient bundle for tourists to stuff into coat pockets or purses.

One side will have a sprawling hart of the entire Greater Washington area, complete with a careful index and mileage guide to all principal cities.

On the other side, the tourists will find a large "blow up" of the central downtown area, showing the location and name of every street in the District.

The central area map will also include these features, which Brinkley believes will be invaluable to visitors trying to traverse the "open-air labyrinth" of city streets:

1. Locations of Government buildings, radio stations, embassies, legations and other "points of interest."

2. Traffic rules of importance to tourists, including speed limits, explanations of traffic signs, pedestrian regulations.

3. United States Routes through the entire area traced in separate colors.

4. An idex of addresses of embassies and legations, hotels, theaters and leading department stores.

5. Borders decorated with photographs of "strictly Washington" scenes and events, such as the President's inaugural parade, the President's Cup Regatta, the Cherry Blossom Festival, and the July Fourth fireworks display on the Monument Grounds.

The guide will be produced in six colors, using the very best, up-to-the-minute reproduction processes, Brinkley revealed.

Brinkley's assistants, Michael Codi and Denver Warnock have already spent six weeks on the basic drafting of the guide, assisted by officials of the Public Roads Administration. They hope to have the finished product ready "sometime in December."

PRA is contributing funds for the preparation of the charts and the District will spend about $3500 to have the guide printed. There will be 10,000 copies in the first edition, but Brinkley expects a demand for "10 times that many" per year after the initial printing.

20 States Pass Laws to Help Solve Juvenile Delinquency

Chicago, Aug. 31 (AP).—The American Public Welfare Association announced today that a score of State legislatures this year took major action to help solve the special problems of juvenile delinquents.

State youth programs are putting increasing emphasis on helping delinquents adjust to society, the association said, rather than merely punishing them in accordance with their misdeeds.

The Wisconsin Legislature created a youth service division in the State Welfare Department to handle cases of persons under 21 who break the law. The division will have full access to facilities of a new diganostic unit in the State university, and juveniles needing medical or psychiatric care will be sent there before their cases are disposed of.

Special Schools in Missouri

Missouri established special schools to help juvenile delinquents. Each such youth will be placed in the school best equipped to help him in his social adjustment, rather than being sent to reform school or prison.

New York's State Youth Commission was extended for three more years and given a $2,380,000 appropriation for operations during the 1948 fiscal year. The Florida Children's Commission, since its organization last spring, has established children's committees in 37 of the State's 67 counties, working for effective cooperation between public agencies and citizen-sponsored services in the field of youth welfare and guidance.

State interim groups established by legislatures to study youth problems include the Arkansas Council on Children and Youth, the Colorado Children's Code Commisison, the Maryland Committee to Study Child Labor Laws, the Oklahoma Children's Code Commisison, and the Oregon Committee on Youth and Youth Guidance.

Illinois Curbs Employment

In Illinois, the Legislature extended the State Child Welfare Functions Commisison and put into effect a new child labor law prohibiting employment of children under 16 at bowling alleys, pool halls, taverns or other amusement places.

The Masaschusetts Legislature provided for a State-wide juvenile court system with specialized judges and probation officers trained in youth guidance. Mississippi's Children's Code Commission is studying adoption laws and other subjects related to youth. California continued its separate youth authority for handling juvenile cases, and North Dakota, Louisiana and Puerto Rico undertook major State action to aid young people.

British Designers Lower Hemlines; Opposition Rises

London, Aug. 31 (AP).—The battle of the long skirt versus the short skirt spread to textile-short Britain this weekend with smart Mayfair designers lined up against the mass producers of models for the millions.

Nearly all the "Big Ten" of British fashdion climbed aboard the Paris and New York bandwagon for lowered hemlines, bu tthe National Federation of Merchant Tailors, representing the "little fellows" of the business, stayed firmly on the side of little-below-the-knee.

The Board of Trade, which issues clothes ratoin coupons and tries to conserve materials, was neutral officially, but let it be known unofficiolly it was in the short-skirt corner.

Firm May Abandon Lebanon as Arabia Pipeline Terminal

Jerusalem, Aug. 31 (AP).—A private informant said today the Trans-Arabian Pipeline Co. was "seriously considering" abandoning Lebanon as the Mediterranean terminus for its planned 150 milion dollar pipeline from Arabia because of a delay in obtaining transit rights across neighboring Syria.

The informant said the 31-inch line, which would be the world's largest, may end somewhere along the Palestine coast.

In addition to the line, which is designed to carry American-owned oil from rich Saudi Arabia fields into the Mediterrannean, close to European markets, American companies expect to spend many additional millions on refinery and port facilities, the informant added.

Aussies Turn on Yankees, Win Davis Cup Doubles

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 31.—Five nights hence the Redskins will find themselves on the same football field with the Los Angeles Rams, although it is highly suspected they do not belong there. That last is the California viewpoint. Out here they think the Rams are headed for the National Football League title without too much strain on their skill.

POVICH

Nevertheless, the exhibition game with the Redskins will draw between 70,000 and 80,000 fans to the Coliseum in sports-daffy Los Angeles, which has been known to turn out 75,000 customers for a night of midget automobile racing.

It is no great trick to survey the Rams' roster and get high on 'em. For their first formal opening of the season, with the intra-squad game out of the way, the Redskins have indeed picked a formidable set of playmates. If the Washington club scrapes past Friday's contest with a victory or even an undisgraced loser, then it follows that the Redskins have a whale of a football team, too.

I do not like to say that the Rams are sure shots to beat the Redskins, because it is never wise to underrate the team that has Sammy Baugh pitching, but it is easy to be impressed with the Rams.

BOB SNYDER is coaching the Rams this year and he is no comelately to the pro football business. Washington fans saw him playing quarterback for Hugo Bezdek's Cleveland pros as far back as 1937; then George Halas later grabbed him to quarterback the Bears for a spell. He's T formation from 'way back, and when Clark Shaugnessey, the daddy of the T, was picking an assistant coach at Maryland U. five years ago, Snyder was his choice.

Bob Waterfield is Snyder's quarterback with the Rams and of Waterfield it is said the only better forward passer in the business is Sammy Baugh, which is thunderous praise. And that day in the snow at Cleveland two years ago when the Redskins lost the play-off title to the Rams, then operating in Cleveland, the best passer on the field was not Baugh but Waterfield.

What the Los Angeles club thinks it has are the best three pass-catchers in pro football, which is a healthy boast but not without a smidgin of reason. At least when Waterfield cocks his arm and looks about him for somebody to aim at, he is not displeased when he notes Jim Benton, Steve Bagarus and John Zilly as eligibles.

FOR A LONG TIME now, Benton, the towering end from Arkansas, has been the league's pass-snagging champion, and the evidence is that Zilly, the new kid from Notre Dame, will go far in the pro league with a lot of footballs under his arm. It was Zilly who took a 46-yard pass for a touchdown for the college All-Stars against the Bears only a week ago at Chicago, and he was the best looking end on the field, college or pro.

Danny Reeves, who owns the Rams, thinks he has come up with some kind of a prize in Bagarus, whom he got by barter with the Redskins last spring. Redskin fans are still pained by that swap. They liked Bagarus and the way he scampered either from scrimmage or with passes, even if George Marshall didn't. Bagarus is happy in Los Angeles, with a new wife and everything, and he's another breakaway back for the club.

Anything that Bagarus can contribute to the discomfort of the Redskins on Friday night he will be happy to do. Particularly if he is able to intercept any of Sammy Baugh's passes, and that is a possibility because Bagarus will be in the Rams' pass-defense lineup. Last year the unhappy Bagarus was saying that Baugh wouldn't throw passes to him, for some reason, which he called petty.

THE RAMS ARE heavy with big-name players in their backfield, like Tommy Harmon, the old Michigander, and Kenny Washington, the California colored boy, but Coach Snyder is not counting much on that pair. Both of 'em are bothered by troublesome knees and are past their prime anyway. They are great favorites on the Coast, but in the heavy going Snyder will string along with Waterfield, Bagarus, Les Horvath, Mel Bleeker, Jerry Cowhig and Dante Magnani in his backfield.

This Horvath, from Ohio State, is supposed to be the hottest article among the newcomers to the club, but there's another sector of thought that believe Cowhig will be the sensation. At Notre Dame last season, the 210-pound Cowhig ran the opposing defenses dizzy, and was a quick draft choice of the Rams scouts.

Little Dante Magnani fits in with Snyder's T-formation. They got him from the Bears and they went high for him, trading Mike Holovak, the good fullback from Boston College to Halas. Bleeker is the fast-breaking back the Rams got from the Philadelphia Eagles. Later in the week we'll tell you about the Redskins.

Bulletin! Nats Now Out Of Flag Race, Lose Two

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

New York, Aug. 31.—Today's red-hot special about the not-so-hot Nats is that they are no longer in the pennant race.

They were beaten twice by the Yankes, which is nothing new. Those two defeats eliminated them from any further pennant consideration, if anyone retained such notions about the Nats.

The double losses, numbers 73 and 74, dropped them exactly 30 games behind the New Yorkers. There are only 28 games remaining on the Nats' schedule.

They gave the crowd of 44,541 stadium clients a close game before bowing, 6-5, in the opener, but merely supplied the opposition in the nightcap, losing gracefully, 5-1.

They literally threw that first game away when Walter Masterson and Buddy Lewis combined to turn Tommy Henrich's seventh-inning single into a sprint all the way around the bases.

Henrich Races all the Way

Henrich had singled Bobby Brown home with the tieing run and continued home himself when Lewis and then Masterson decided to see who could throw the ball farthest in the wrong direction.

For a change, they played errorless ball in the second game, but it went for naught as Charlie Wensloff threw a five-hitter at them.

Wensloff, who won his third game against no defeats, got some powerful help from his rookie batterymate, Sherman Lollar, up from the Newark Bears. Lollar unloaded a triple with the bases full of Yankees in the fourth inning. That was the big part of a four-run uprising against Sid Hudson, who departed the scene in the sixth with his ninth loss tagged on him.

The Yanks had gotten only one hit and were trailing, 1-0, until then.

Hudson himself ruined Wensloff's shutout when he followed Eddie Yost's blooper double with a weak single in the third.

The Nats couldn't even muster a serious threat after that. Stan Spence ended the contest by rapping into the 135th double play the Yankees have engineered this year.

Vernon Hits a Homer

Vernon slapped Vic Raschi's first offering into the right field pavillion for his seventh homer to launch the Nat second inning in the opener. But the lead was quickly wiped out by the Yanks in the next frame.

George Stirnweiss, who wrecked 'em yesterday, did the Nats no good in the third inning when he blasted a Masterson pitch into the left field stand to score Phil Rizzuto and Raschi ahead of him.

The fifth saw the Yanks stretch their margin to 4-1 on Rizzuto's triple and an infield out and Masterson showed plenty of skill in escaping with only that run. He walked three Yanks and had to fan George McQuinn with the sacks loaded to ward off additional damage.

Raschi, meanwhile, didn't allow his second hit until the sixth inning when Yost singled.

Raschi Chased in Seventh

But Rashi's luck ran out in the seventh as the Nats chased him with a four-run splurge to gain a 5-4 lead. Frank Mancuso's triple to right center produced two runs, and Stan Spence and Pinch-hitter Cecil Travis accounted for the other pair with outfield flies.

Once again, however, the Nat lead vanished almost instantly, this time for keeps. Masterson started his own downfall when he passed Pinch-hitter Bobby Brown in the Yanks' half of the seventh. Brown advanced on Stirnweiss' sacrifice and then came the play that sent Masterson into the loss column for the twelfth time this year.

Henrich singled sharply to right and Brown headed home. Buddy Lewis' throw to the plate went over Mancuso's head, but Masterson stopped it, unfortunately.

Walter's next act was to throw into left field, trying to get Henrich racing to third. The Yankee outfielder didn't even slow down, completing his uninterrupted tour of the bases with plenty to spare.

August Was So Interesting

New York, Aug. 31.—August was an interesting month for the Nats. Look what happened to them:

1. They lost 24 of the 34 games played.

2. They blew a chance to equal an all-time Washington losing streak of 13 in a row by winning after 11 setbacks.

3. The players affirmed their loyalty to Manager Ossie Bluege who, as an aftermath, took a punch at a baseball writer.

4. They were elmininated from the pennant race.

They've got a good cahnce to get away to a very unimpressive September, too. They play the A's twice tomorrow.

Cards Pound Redlegs, 15-8

Cincinnati, Aug. 31 (AP).—The St. Louis Cardinals ran roughshod over Cincinnati today to win 15-8 in a loosely-played game before a crowd of 15,997.

The Cards, making their last appearance of the season here, combed five Redleg pitchers for 14 hits, including a homer by Ron Northey and Erv Dusak's two-run triple.

Howie Pollet, the St. Louis starter, left the game in the sixth during a three-run Cincinnati rally but was credited with the victory.

Buffalo Bills Upset Yanks By 28 to 24

Buffalo, N. Y., Aug. 31 (AP).—The Buffalo Bills opened their All-America Football Conference season today by upsetting the New York Yankees, 28-24 in a thrill-packed game before 32,385 spectators, largest crowd in local pro football history.

George (The Kid) Ratterman carried the Bills on his slender shoulders, passing for two touchdowns and setting up the other two with his marksmaship. His pitch to Chet Mutryn decided the issue midway through the final period, the touchdown overcoming a 24-21 lead the Yanks had gained on Harvey Johnson's 19-yard field goal.

The game had a dramatic finish, Orban (Spec) Sanders passing the Eastern Division champs to the Buffalo 10-yard line. His fling to Lloyd Cheatam on the three-yard line missed fire after the final gun had sounded.

Claude (Buddy) Young, former Illinois star who broke into the pro ranks today, gained 81 yards in 13 attempts, an average of 6.23, and ran 50 yards for a Yankee touchdown in the third period after taking Sanders' pass.

Raterman, who did all the Bill's passing, completed 9 of 13 for 121 yards.

Previous high attendance for a professional game in Buffalo was 30,302, last season for the Cleveland-Buffalo contest.

49ers Trounce Brooklyn, 23-7

San Francisco, Aug. 31 (AP).—San Francisco's 49ers, scoring in every period, opened their All-America conference professional football season today in impressive fashion by defeating the Brooklyn Dodgers, 23 to 7. A crowd estimated at 30,000 witnessed the contest in sunny weather.

The Dodgers, with their great passer, Left Halfback Glenn Dobbs, hitting his mark accurately, scored in the first three minutes of play to grab a 7-0 lead.

The Forty-niners took command shortly after, tied the score, and dominated the contest until the final gun.

Bums Batter Giants Who Hit 182d Homer

Brooklyn, Aug. 31 (AP).—Led by Catcher Bruce Edwards who batted in five runs with a home run and two singles, the Brooklyn Dodgers made it three in a row over the New York Giants today with a 10-4 victory before about 35,000 fans at Ebbets Field.

Willard Marshall homered in the seventh inning for the Giants to enable them to tie the major league home run record of 182 set by the New York Yankees in 1936.

The victory, the Dodgers' fourth straight, enabled them to retain their 7½-game first-place lead over the St. Louis Cardinals. The Cards defeated the Cincinnati Reds in a free-hitting game, 15-8.

Hank Behrman was the starter for the Dodgers and twirled five hitless innings before Bill Rigney broke the spell with a clean single to center in the sixth. Behrman weakened in the late innings and when the Giants threatened in the eighth, he was relieved by Vic Lombardi.

The victory was Behrman's fifth against four defeats. Monte Kennedy, the first of Mel Ott's four futile hurlers, was tagged with the loss, his eleventh against nine victories.

Race Driver Dies in Crash

Thompson, Conn., Aug. 31 (AP).—Earl John, about 34, of Eriton, N. J., was killed today while attempting to qualify for the 25-lap big car feature race at the Thompson Speedway won by Bill Holland of Bridgeport.

The fatal accident occurred before 10,000 fans during the third qualifying heat when John's car crashed headon into another auto, which had gone into a spill near the rails. The impact sent John clear of his car into the track where he died instantly.

Colin Long Leads Way In Four Set Victory

By Gayle Talbot

Forest Hills, N. Y., Aug. 31 (AP).—Australia's hard-pressed Davis Cuppers gained at least a 24-hour reprieve today when their brilliant doubles combination of Jack Bromwich and Colin Long defeated the two clouting Californians, Jack Kramer and Ted Schroeder, 6—4, 2—6, 6—2, 6—4, in a sparkling match before 6000 at Forest Hills Stadium.

The bespectacled Long, a husky newcomer to internatonal tennis, won the hearts and the huzzahs of the crowd with a spectacular brand of net play that repeatedly choked off every American attempt to pull the match from the fire. His overhead game was as deadly as anything ever seen in the big stadium.

By capturing the tandem event, the Aussies at least averted a 5-0 whitewashing such as was plastered on them at Melbourne last winter and made sure that the Americans would not clinch the trophy before the final day.

Having won both of yesterday's opening singles, the United States needs victory only in one of tomorrow's concluding solos to put the silverware away for another year.

Two Ambushed Singles Stars

For the most part, Kramer and Schroeder looked today very much like a pair of fine singles players who had run into an ambush. They displayed flashes of individual brilliance, but appeared to play with no excessive interest and were no match for the tight team tactics of their opponents.

Three times the Aussies broke through Kramer's high-kicking service, once in each of their winning sets, and that was all they needed to wrap it up. Each of the winners dropped his delivery but once, and that was in the second set, in which Schroeder and Kramer put on their only sustained exhibition of the match to win four straight games.

As evidence of their over-all superiority, the Australian pair scored 43 placements to 26 for the American champions, who won the National doubles title only a week ago at Brookline. Thirty-nine balls knocked weakly into the net also told eloquently of the American rout.

It'll Be All Over Today

The situation tonight bore some resemblance to that of 1939 in Philadelphia, when, after they had dropped the first two singles, the Australians came back to grab the doubles. There, however, the resemblance appeared to end, for the lads from Down Under on that other occasion also captured both singles on the third day and took the gleaming mug out of the country.

The chances of that happening tomorrow were most remote, what with Kramer ready and anxious to swing his haymaker again. His opponent was to be Bromwich and the only question in anyone's mind tonight was whether the flaxen-maned Aussie might win a set. Dinny Palls saved only five games in his rout by Kramer yesterday.

Tomorrow's other singles paired Schroeder against Pails, and majority opinion favored the American to take that one, too, and make the final count 4-1 for the defenders. Schroeder planned to return to California immediately after the cup matches end, passing up the national championships which start next Friday.

Long's fine exhibition today convinced the rather skimpy crowd that the Australians have some good ones coming along to carry on the battle for the Cup even if Bromwich holds good his resolve not to make the long trip to this country again.

The chunky Aussie played with fine spirit and fire, and, when Bromwich showed symptoms of wobbling, yanked him back on his feet. Bromwich, long recognized as one of the world's best doubles players, contributed his share to many spectacular rallies, but mainly it was Long who scored the big "kills" when they were most

All Eight Interhigh Teams Go Into Action Tomorrow

ALL EIGHT interhigh football rivals swing into action tomorrow in their first grid drills of the 1947 season.

Tech, Eastern, Central, Wilson, Western, Roosevelt and defending champion Coolidge start drilling at 9 a. m. on their respective fields, while Anacostia begins practice at 2 p. m.

Coolidge and Tech, last year's winner and runner up in interhigh play, are expected to field strong teams again, but the dark horse may well be Phil Fox's Roosevelt team.

Fox did wonders with his youngsters in his first year, scoring several major upsets and instilling a new spirit at the school which previously had been regarded as a pushover.

Central came fast toward the end of the season, and should be better this year. Eastern, Wilson, Western and Anacostia are unknown quantities.

On the prep school front, Georgetown Prep opens practice Tuesday at the school's football camp at Rehoboth Beach.

Gonzaga, regarded by many as Washington's first ranking team last fall, has been drilling since August 17 at 34th and Benning rd. Of the 115 boys who first came out, only 59 remain after several squad cuts.

Coaches Joe Kozik and Father Herlihy are building a new line this season but are said to be three deep at every position but center. Gil Buckingham and Johnny Hogan are enough to insure another fine backfield despite the loss of Wimpy Dechard.

needed and who fired his bullet service across to spike any threats of an American resurgence.

Although it generally is considered fatal to try to lob against such a pair of overhead specialists as Kramer and Schroeder, Long proved it could be done effectively. Perhaps a score of times he caught the Americans flat-footed with perfectly stroked loopers that just cleared their rackets and hit within a foot of the baseline.

A factor that cost the Americans heavily was Schroeder's inability to get his hair-trigger net game functioning properly. Many a point was lost when, after several lightning exchanges inside the service lines, Ted just failed to clear the net.

Kramer's failure to keep his feared first service in bounds also contributed to the defeat. The Aussies smacked his second serve like they owned it.

The day was made a complete success for the invaders when they also won an exhibition mixed doubles that followed the Cup tussle. Geoff Brown, spare member of the Aussie squad, teamed with Mrs. Nancy Wynne Bolton, Australian woman's champion, to win a quick ..—2, ..—4, decision over Gardnar Mulloy of Miami and Mrs. Patricia Canning Todd of Hidden Valley, Calif.

Garvin Grill, Thrifty Win

Thrifty Beverages men and Garvin's Grill girls captured the D. C. Softball championships in yesterday's final games at Greenbelt.

Thrifty defeated Mount Rainier, 2-0, and Garvin's downed FBI, 7-0, in the title games.

The winners will play in the regional tournament tomorrow night in Philadelphia with Garvin's meeting the Maryland champions and Thrifty Beverages facing the Philadelphia winners in first round contests.

The victorious Thrifty Beverages team was forced to play two games yesterday to gain the title from Mount Rainier.

With a one-game lead in the best of three series as yesterday's play began, the Thrifty team found itself all even as Mount Rainier won the first game, 5-1, behind Tom Dobyns' pitching. Bob Mathias clubbed a home run to pace the winners.

Thrifty came back to win the second game and the series behind the 1-hit hurling of Fred Kramer.

Garvin's Grill took the girls championship from FBI as Marion Burke limited the losers to one safety.

Seven mens teams and six womens outfits are entered in the Central Atlantic regional playoffs in Philadelphia. The regional winners will represent the area in the world series later this month in Cleveland.

Dutch Leonard Beaten, 3-2, as Braves, Phils Split

Johnny Sain Pitches His 18th Victory

Philadelphia, Apg. 31 (AP).—The Philadelphia Phillies and Boston Braves divided a doubleheader here today before 31,510, the Braves winning the first behind the four-hit pitching of Johnny Sain, 3 to 2, and the Phils taking the second by pounding their former teammate, Si Johnson, for 16 hits, 7 to 2.

Sain Edged Emil (Dutch) Leonard to win his eighteenth game of the year against nine defeats. It was Leonard's eighth setback against 16 victories.

Mike McCormick's single to left field in the seventh inning scored Bob Elliott from second base with the winning run. Elliott had reached second on a walk and a sacrifice.

In the second game, Blix Donnelly held the Braves to nine hits. The Phils broke a 2-2 stalemate in the seventh inning on Johnny Wyrostek's walk, Don Padgett's triple and Howie Schlutz' single, good for two runs.

Detroit Takes Two From Lowly Browns

St. Louis, Aug. 31 (AP).—The Detroit Tigers swept a double-header from the last-place St. Louis Browns today, 11 to 2 and 10 to 1, a big first inning in both games permitting Hal Newhouser and Stubby Overmire to coast to easy victories.

Newhouser's defeat in the first game was his fourteenth against 15 defeats. It was his first appearance on the mound since he was fined $250 recently by Manager Steve O'Neil for "indifference."

There was nothing "indifferent" about Hal's performance today. He checked the Browns with eight scattered hits, fanned seven batters and batted in one of the 11 runs the Tigers piled up off Bob Muncrief and Walt Brown. Dick Wakefield of the Tigers and Vern Stephens of the Browns hit homers and George Bell batted in four runs.

Ted Belts 27th Homer, Bosox Beat A's, 5-1

Boston, Aug. 31 (AP).—With Ted Williams hitting his twenty-seventh homer with one on, the Boston Red Sox today defeated the Philadelphia Athletics, 5-1, for their fifth victory in succession, their third over the A's in as many days. A paid crowd of 22,944 saw Joe Dobson pitch shutout ball until after one out in the ninth for his fifteenth decision this year.

Williams' clout, a high smash into the bullpen in deep river field, scored Johnny Pesky, who had walked, and drove out the Mackmen's starting flinger, 20-year-old Carl Scheib, who was seeking his fifth victory.

Ted Singles, Too

Williams also drove in the first run of the game in the opening inning by lining to right field to score Pesky from third. Pesky had walked and raced to third on Dom DiMaggio's single over the second baseman's head into right.

Roy Partee's single, Eddie Pellagrini's double high off the left field wall, Wally Moses' fly out to right and Pesky's triple accounted for two runs in the fifth.

Pesky brought the crowd to its feet when he tried to stretch his triple, which rolled into the far corner of right field, into a homer. He was just nipped at the plate on a fast relay from Bingo Binks to Pete Suder to Buddy Rosar.

Dobson Has Lapse

Dobson had a lapse in the ninth when the A's combined two walks, a single and an infield out for their lone run.

In the three game series the Philadelphians scored but two runs, their only other marker was fashioned Friday night when they lost 2-1. They were shut out 2-0 yesterday by Tex Hughson.

Everyone Has A 'Baseball' Day

Chicago, Aug. 31 (AP).—In the second of three successive days honoring baseball players at Wrigley Field, Nick Strincevich, 31-year-old Pirate pitcher, today was presented an automobile by fans from his home town of Gary, Ind. Bert Haas, Cincinnati outfielder, will be similarly honored tomorrow by his neighbors from Naperville, Ill.

Hank Wins Suit For Prediction

CHICAGO, Aug. 31.—Ralph Kiner Drove across his 100th and 101st runs with a homer against the Cubs today Hank Greenberg proved he knows hitters.

Before the season started, Greenberg bet Frank McKinney, Pirate president, a suit of clothes that the Buc outfielder would drive across more than 100 runs this season.

McKinney will buy the suit, a tuxedo, at an exclusive Fifth Avenue store owned by Hank's father-in-law.

4-Run Sixth Gives Cubs 6-3 Win Over Bucs

Chicago, Aug. 31 (AP).—Five singles, coming in quick succession with none away in the sixth inning, gave the cubs four runs and a 6-3 decision over the Pirates here today before 22,925 fans and ended the series at one-all.

After Ralph Kiner had shoved the Pirates ahead, 3 to 2, on his thirty-ninth homer of the season in the sixth, the Cubs reached Nick Strincevich for successive singles by Andy Pafko, Phil Cavarretta and Bill Nicholson to start their half of the inning. The Cubs carried on against Al Lyons for two more singles by Clyde McCullough and Bob Sturgeon to clinch the decision.

Doyle Lade went the route for the Cubs, allowing six hits in acquiring his tenth victory of the season.

Kiner's homer, coming with one aboard, extended his runs-batted-in total to 101.

Midgets Average 7000 at Shows

An average crowd of 7800 spectators has seen the weekly midget auto races at the West Lanham Speedway, according to attendance figures released yesterday by General Manager Howard Livingston.

Four more racing dates extending through the present month remain on the schedule.

Friday's races have already been entered by Larry Bloomer, star Norristown, N. J., racer. Ed (Dutch) Schaeffer and George Fonder, who were sidelined with damaged machines last week, are expected to be ready Friday.

Team Match Added To Rassle Show

The wrestling team of Stu Hart of Canada and Billy Darnell of Camden, N. J., will take off again Wednesday night at Turner's Arena, meeting Joe Montana of Wyoming and Red Ryan of Philadelphia in a special added attraction.

Chisox Beat Tribe Twice, Ruffing Wins

Cleveland, Aug. 31 (AP).—Behind effective hurling by Ed Lopat and Red Ruffing, the Chicago White Sox took a double header off the Cleveland Indians today, winning the first match, 7 to 3, and taking the second, 3 to 1, to sweep their three-game series.

Lopat, in winning his thirteenth victory in the opener, allowed eight hits—one more than the Sox got off Don Black and Steve Gromek, but he kept them scattered.

Black, charged with the loss, was relieved in the sixth after holding Chicago to only three safeties, but walking five men and allowing four of the Sox's seven runs.

Ruffing held the Tribe to two hits in the first seven innings of the nightcap, but left the game in the eighth when Cleveland made three of their four other blows and scored their lone run on George Metkovich's double that sent Joe Gordon home.

Brewers Leave for Tourney

City Champs Make 2d Trip To Harrisburg

Heurich's Brewers, amateur baseball champions of Washington, leave this morning to play in the All-America Amateur Baseball Association unlimited championships this week at Harrisburg, Pa.

The Brewers will be making their second trip to the tournament, having reached the semifinal round at Baltimore in 1944.

Four Wins in Row

With four straight victories in Washington City Series play under their belts, the Post Industrial League champions will try to match the performance of the Marx Jewelers team of Washington, which won the junior national title last week at Johnstown, Pa.

Manager George (Pepco) Barry will lead a squad of 19 men to Harrisburg, including Pitchers Harry Crauthamel and Boots Panella, drafted from the Cameo team and Catcher Sonny Moreland, drafted from Sunnybrook.

Men Making Trips

The Heurich men making the trip are Pitchers Otis Printz, Jack Lyons, Ernie Utz and Frank Mahon; Catchers Knocky Thomas and Fee Colliere; Infielders Bernie Good, Willie Kaufman, Frank Brewer and Max Coe and Outfielders Archia Via, Jack Castro, Joe Valenti, Bobby Horan, Red Giegerich and Player Manager Barry.

Play in the tournament is slated to begin Wednesday, but as the draw has not yet been completed, the Brewers do not yet know whether they will see action the first day.

Hallahan Bests Lefty Gomez in Pitching Duel

Binghamton, N. Y., Aug. 31 (AP).—Vernon (Lefty) Gomez and William (Wild Bill) Hallahan, the southpaw pitchers who opposed each other in the first major league all-star game at Chicago in 1933, have toed the rubber once again.

The pair took the hill for an old-timers' game as part of a night honoring Gomez, manager of the Binghamton Triplets of the Class A Eastern League.

A team piloted by Hallahan, former St. Louis Cardinal pitcher and a resident of Binghamton, defeated one bossed by Gomez, 1 to 0, in two innings.

This reversed the 1933 outcome when Gomez, then a New York Yankee ace, received credit for the all-star victory and Hallahan, a St. Louis Cardinal star, was the loser.

Both wore the uniforms of their former major league teams. The Cardinals airmailed a suit to Hallahan with a note expressing a wish he was around to do some fancy relief work in the current tough National League pennant chase.

Sunnybrook Wins To Expand Lead

Sunnybrook increased its league lead to two full games by defeating Snug Harbor, 5-2, yesterday in a Prince Georges County League contest.

Lefty McIntyre pitched 4 hit ball as Sonny Moreland paced the winners' attack with three safeties in three trips to the plate.

In other league games, Campus Club downed Bladensburg, 2-1 and Clinton trounced WOW, 7-4.

Pastall, Chaffee Gain Tennis Finals

Philadelphia, Aug. 31 (AP).—Defending Champion Helen Pastal and Nancy Chaffee—the same two Californians who met for the title in 1946—battled their way into the finals of the 1947 United States Girls' Lawn Tennis Championships today at the Philadelphia Cricket Club.

Miss Pastall breezed past Doris Newcomer of Burbank, Calif., 6—2, 6—2, and Miss Chaffee whipped the second-seeded Beverly Baker, 3—6, 7—5, 6—3.

Irish War Vets Win VFW League Crown

The Irish War Vets defeated Equality Walter Reed Post, 11-7, yesterday on the Ellipse, to win the VFW League baseball championship.

The victors will play in the National VFW tournament in Cleveland later this month.

Bernie Myles struck out 12 Walter Reed batsmen as he gained credit for the victory. Walt Brown, Irish Vets' catcher, slammed three hits in four trips to lead the batters.

On Borrowed Clubs

Cinderella Kid George Allmon Is National Caddy Champ

Columbus, Ohio, Aug. 30 (AP). Bashful, gum-chewing George E. Allmon, jr., 16-year-old bronzed blond from Kansas City, Mo., defeated dark-haired, grinning Johnny Bernard, 17, of Columbus, Ohio, today to annex the second annual National Caddy championship.

The kid from Missouri, a junior at Southeast High School, triumphed 2 and 1 in the 36-hole championship round to capture the yard-high President Truman trophy, a $1500 college scholarship, and a $250 set of golf clubs.

It was a Cinderella day for the 5-foot 10-inch 150-pound lad from the "Show Me" State, for he played the tourney with a set of borrowed clubs, and he said he had no intention of going to college until he had the caddy scholarship wrapped up.

Bernard, who recovered from a six-down deficit at the end of 15 holes to make it a real battle, won a $750 two-year scholarship in addition to a $250 college award for winning the Columbus District title.

Although most of the 97 entrants from 16 States and the District of Columbia who started the tournament early this week were accompanied by sponsoring representatives, Allmon came alone.

He was sponsored by the Kansas City Golf Association, after winning the caddy title there—and he brought along the clubs of the kid he defeated in the finals of the city event.

Louis Scores 80 in Tourney

World Heavyweight Boxing Champion Joe Louis qualified in the championship flight of the two-day medal play Capital City golf tournament yesterday at the Wake Robin Club.

Louis shot 40, 40—80 to trail Medalist Judson Grant of Los Angeles by six strokes. Grant shot a two-over-par 34, 40—74 to pace the field of 66 amateurs.

Howard Wheeler, Negro National Open champion, led the 23 professional entries with a 34, 38—72.

Twenty-seven holes of medal play competition will be held today at 9 a. m.

In the women's division, Mrs. Hazel Foreman was low with 95, Mrs. Magnolia Reynolds, second with 99, and Mrs. Sarah Smith third with 102. All three are of Washington. Mrs. Thelma Cowans, Detroit, national women's champion, had 103.

The 24 women entered will play 18 additional holes today in three flights. The Joe Louis trophy will go to the winner of the shamplonship flight.

Cincinnati Boys Take Legion Title

Hollywood, Aug. 31 (AP).—The Robert E. Bentley Post of Cincinnati, Ohio, today won the American Legion national junior baseball title by defeating the Little Rock Ebert Post, 3-2, behind the tight pitching of Bob Andres, who fanned 10 batters.

Andres edged the Southerners' Enrie Funk in a close twirling duel as the Ohio boys broke a 2-2 tie in the last half of the eighth inning when first baseman Jimmie Frey singled home Stew Hein from second base. The Bentley posters ended the tourney with three wins, no defeats.

Fitch Turns Down Olympic Games

Sious Falls, S. Dak., Aug. 31 (AP). Bob Fitch, world champion discus tosser and chief hope in that event of the United States 1948 Olympic entry in London, said today that he definitely would not compete in the London Matches.

Fitch gave as his reason wanting to devote full time to coaching—he's now assistant coach at Augustana College here—and his dislike of the strain of constant competition necessary to keep up with AAU standards.

Lions Whip Boston Yanks, 14-7

Flint, Mich., Aug. 31 (AP).—The Detroit Lions staged a length-of-the field march to paydirt midway in the fourth quarter today to whip the Boston Yanks 14 to 7 in a national football league exhibition game here before an estimated 12,000 fans.

Ted Cook scored the winning touchdown on a 29-yard pass from Clyde La Force. Merv Pregulman kicked the extra point.

The Lions opened the scoring in the second quarter with Roy Zimmerman hitting Tippy Madarik with a 39-yard aerial for the counter. Pregulman kicked the point to make it 7 to 0.

That margin looked good until early in the fourth quarter when Paul Governali passed 22 yards to Al Crisler, who streaked into the end-zone to put Boston back in the game. Monk Maznicki converted.

National Weather Summary

Copyr., 1947, Edw. L. A. Wagner

TWENTY-FOUR-HOUR SUMMARY—The weatherman says, "most all sections of the U. S. will enjoy sunny weather with clear to partly cloudy skies Labor Day. Temperatures will be cool and comfortable from New England through the border States to the Pacific Northwest.

Maximum temperatures will be in the 70s in New England, New York and Pennsylvania as cool northeastery winds push down from eastern Canada. Afternoon readings will be in the 70s in the Lake Region while the mercury will climb into the 80s from the northern Plains to Washington and Oregon.

It will be uncomfortably hot and sultry in the Gulf States, the central Plains, the central Mississippi and lower Ohio Valleys as hot southerly winds off the Gulf of Mexico invade these areas. Weather experts say the mercury will soar above 100 degrees in many sections of Missouri, Oklahoma, Kansas and Nebraska and continue to deplete soil moisture in these parched areas.

Scattered showers and thunderstorms are predicted from Michigan to Virginia, Florida, the southern Rockies and eastern North Dakota. (Affected areas show where storms will occur.)

Fotocast fans know warm, moist southerly winds off the Gulf of Mexico spell weather-wilting temperatures and sticky, humid air for sections this air flow visits. Cool northerly winds from central Canada and the north Atlantic bring cool, invigorating weather. Fronts on the fotocast mark the line along which these air flows meet usually causing showers. As fronts and affected or stormy areas move in the direction shown by arrows attached to fronts, air flow and weather change.

Celebrating Legionnaires and New York's holiday crowds will enjoy clear, cool, sunny weather.

Today's maximum temperature forecasts include St. Louis, 102; Kansas City, 100; Nashville, 94; Atlanta, 91; Chicago, 90; Detroit and Milwaukee, 86; Washington and Pittsburgh, 80; Philadelphia, 79; New York, Hartford and Cleveland, 78; Boston, 76; Buffalo, 73 and Albany, 72.

Md. Sales Tax Puts Bite on Younger Set

Maryland's younger generation has run afoul of the Maryland sales tax.

This is the season when the young set ordinarily begins Christmas card merchandising to earn a little extra spending money, and Maryland sales tax division ruled last week that such sales are subject to the sales tax.

In order to comply with the law, the young merchants must take out a certificate that costs a dollar, which may take a big bite out of their profits. In addition, a lengthy form must be filled out to get the certificate and to report the pennies collected.

The sales tax division holds out one ray of hope for the young merchants, however. If the firms whose products are sold will take out the collection certificate, the price of the merchandise can be collected by the children, plus the tax, and the tax turned over to the manufacturer for payment to the State. If the manufacturer does not wish to assume this task, however, the individual merchant must take out the certificate and pay the dollar.

Some of the companies have accepted the responsibility of collecting and paying the tax, while others have made no decision.

If they have to handle the job on their own, Junior and Sis will get a double advantage from their small business this year. Filling out those forms will give them a glimpse of their dad's pet peeve—burrowing through an income tax blank.

TO SELL OR NOT TO SELL—The junior set of Maryland faces new troubles in the time-honored custom of selling Christmas cards and other gadgets for mail order firms. The Maryland sales tax must be collected, and in order to comply with the law, the young merchant must pay a dollar for his license to collect the tax which mounts up to a large part of his profits. Here Jean Regan, 13, 324 Franklin ave., and Joan Kerr, 15, 8308 Worth ave., both of Silver Spring, Md., are contemplating the complicated form for applying for the license tial records of the Securities and Exchange Commission which were never disclosed to me. I have asked to see these records and my requests were refused.

"How can I answer 'official accusations' I have never seen?

"It is a matter of open and official record, however, that the Securities and Exchange Commission's charges, when submitted to a Federal Grand Jury in the Southern District of New York, were rejected."

Cohen produced a file of correspondence between himself and Lauchlin Currie, administrative assistant to the President in 1942 and 1943, in which he protested against the investigation and demanded that he be given an opportunity to answer whatever charges were in the report. He contended that, as an individual, he had no contractual relations with the British government.

Letters Sought Information

Currie disclaimed any connection with the probe except as intermediary between the President and the SEC. He did not refer to the question of Cohen's amenability to investigation as an individual but informed him the report was being written.

Cohen's files contain a copy of a letter to the SEC, dated February 20, 1943, asking that officers of Empire and its subsidiaries be permitted to check and "clarify" the report. Copy of a letter to Currie dated February 27 says his letter to the SEC was not answered.

On November 23, 1942, the file shows that Cohen wrote to Currie endeavoring to learn who had requested the investigation. He said it had created unfavorable impressions "all over the country" and said it had not been a probe into the affairs of his corporations but "what I would call a personal inquisition."

Error of Interpretation

He called attention to an error of interpretation which materially altered the sense of a quotation from the Truman Committee report.

(The Truman Committee said "Mr. Cohen on an investment of $42,500 will be entitled to 30 per cent interest on all profits in connection with approximately 34 million dollars in contracts." This was interpreted to mean Cohen would receive 30 per cent of 34 million dollars, or $10,200,000 in profits.

(Obviously, the committee stated that whatever profits Cohen might receive would depend upon total profits from the enterprises and could be only 30 per cent of these).

Cohen presented two affidavits from Carl S. Serling, assistant secretary of seven of the companies, showing that altogether Cohen received a total of $43,593.74 during the life of these seven companies and that he and members of his family received a total of $193,593.74 from the same companies.

Delivery Records Cited

In answer to charges in the SEC that his Empire Ordnance Corp. had not made a gun for the British in conformity with contract specifications until 13 months after the contract was awarded, Cohen produced a record of deliveries to the British which showed:

That 1 recoil mechanism was delivered in June, 1941; 18 recoils and 2 guns in July; 28 mounts, 85 recoils and 8 guns in August; 80 mounts, 105 recoils and 29 guns in September; 206 mounts, 217 recoils and 63 guns in October; 338 mounts, 62 recoils and 30 guns in November, and 390 mounts, 218 recoils and 106 guns in December. The latter month was 13 months after the contract was signed.

Cohen said that whatever delays were encountered were due partly to the necessity for equipping plants to do work previously expected from subcontractors, partly to the need for training unskilled workmen and partly to delays in material deliveries over which Empire had no control. Nevertheless, he pointed out, Empire received repeated congratulations from the British and from the United States War Department on the quality and performance of its products.

Halifax Letter Quoted

Among those which he turned over to The Washington Post were the following:

From Maj. Gen. Levin H. Campbell, former Chief of Ordnance, dated December 8, 1942: "British veterans of tank warfare in Libya inform the United States Army that 'nothing the Germans have in North Africa can beat the firepower of the guns on American tanks.' They are referring to the guns that you make. The smash of those guns is taking the sting out of Nazi Marshal Rommel's attack on the British lines. 'Battlefields strewn with shattered German tanks,' the British say, 'show how effective is the fire of American made guns.' The Ordnance Department hails your achievements as gun producers."

From Lord Halifax, former British Ambassador, dated March 5, 1942, "I can assure you that I was immensely interested in all that I saw and heard at your Manayunk plant the other day, and am very glad that I was able to visit it . . . It does not look to me as if Mr. Dewar's confidence in you was misplaced." Michael V. Dewar was head of the British Tank Mission and made the original contracts with Empire.

Other Letters of Praise

Another letter from Halifax, dated December 28, 1942: "I know what admirable work has been carried out on British contracts by the Empire Ordnance Corp and of what value your tank equipment and your guns have been to our forces in the Middle East. I would like to send to all who work in your plants my best wishes for a record-breaking New Year."

From Dewar, dated July 21, 1942: "I would like to take this opportunity of saying how very pleased I am to know that the efforts of Empire Ordnance have been crowned with success, and to congratulate you and all those in your works who have helped to create the production of 75-mm. guns which you have achieved."

From Senator Wagner (D., N. Y.), dated March 20, 1943:

"May I congratulate you upon your patriotic achievement and the valuable contribution you have made and are making in our determined effort to win this war so that liberty will be preserved and slavery abolished from the face of the earth. As one of New York's representatives, I am proud of your record."

Production Difficulties Cited

From E. P. Taylor, director-general of the British Ministry of Supply Mission, dated August 21, 1942:

"We appreciate very fully all the efforts which Empire Ordnance Corp. has made toward the carrying out of the various contracts which we confided to you. The production difficulties involved in starting practically from scratch have been very considerable, but these have been overcome by the Empire Ordnance Corp. and its effects have contributed materially toward the success of the British tank construction program in the United States.

"At the present time we have recovered all our advance payments to Empire Ordnance Corp., either by deduction from the value of material delivered and invoiced to us, or by repayment from you.

"We regret we have no form of British insignia similar to the United States Navy 'E' or United States Army 'A' which we could award to you. If such a form of insignia had existed, I am certain that Empire Ordnance Corp. would have been favorably considered for same."

Taylor's Statements Reiterated

From Walter Venning, who succeeded Taylor as director-general of the Mission, dated December 28, 1942, reiterating Taylor's statements in his August letter.

From Brig. Gen. Burton O. Lewis, deputy chief of industrial service of the United States Army Ordnance Department, dated May 22, 1942.

"Your company is to be congratulated on the splendid record they are now making in the production of 75 mm. tank guns."

As for guns rejected by Aberdeen Proving Ground, which the SEC report said were numerous, Cohen handed The Washington Post a statement by Raymond Voyes, secretary of Empire, that Empire rejections were less than those of any other manufacturer. Voyes says that four guns were rejected at one time and inspection showed the fault to be in the failure of a part made by the United States arsenal at Watervleit, N. Y.

Voyes says in his statement that at one time Empire was forced to install a forge plant, which it did in five months at a cost of $500,000, while another company had estimated a time of 18 months and a cost of one million dollars for the same job.

Bus Driver's Clew Points To Chicago in May Killings

Passenger Wearing Bloody Uniform Is Sought; Funeral Rites Here Today

Midwest police yesterday checked a report the slayer of Robert L. May, 2d, and his 22-year-old wife may have headed for Chicago, as plans were completed for their funeral here today.

Police Chief Joe Bosler of Grand Island, Nebr., said an Omaha-Chicago bus driver told authorities he carried a passenger wearing a blood-spotted Army uniform about the time the Mays' bodies were found alongside a Nebraska highway.

"It is one of many reports police have received," the chief said.

May, 22, son of the Alexandria, Barcroft & Washington Transit Co. general manager, and his wife, Elizabeth, were found shot to death in a roadside clump of bushes by two farm boys early Thursday morning.

A Grand Island filling station attendant said they had two soldiers in their car when they stopped at his station for gasoline the preceding night.

Suspect List Exhausted

W. H. Dorrance, sheriff of Douglas (Omaha) County, said no suspects have been questioned since Saturday and added the present suspect list has been exhausted.

One possible new lead came from an Omaha night club waitress who said a couple who looked "something like the Mays" dined at the club between 10 and 11:30 o'clock the night before the killing, Dorrance said.

Another man dined with the couple, the waitress said, but Dorrance told The Washington Post yesterday the waitress' description of this other man was too vague to provide much help to authorities.

The Mays' presence Wednesday night in Omaha, however, would help account for some of the time after they left Denver, Colo., at 9:30 Wednesday morning, Dorrance said.

Double Funeral Today

A double funeral service for the slain couple will be held at 11 a. m. today at Demaine funeral home, 520 S. Washington st., in Alexandria. The Rev. Edward Tate, headmaster of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, and Robert K. Oakley, first reader of the Alexandria First Church of Christ, Scientist, will officiate. Burial will take place in Mount Comfort Cemetery.

Bodies of the two murder victims arrived here Saturday afternoon from Omaha.

Dorrance said several dozen Junior G-Men from Father Flanagan's Boys Town, 2½ miles from where the Mays' bodies were discovered, found no clews in a close search of nearby fields.

Dorrance said the Junior G-Men, working under direction of detectives from Omaha, were looking especially for young May's billfold.

The Grand Island filling station station said May flashed a quantity of bills when getting gasoline. Officers thought the slayers may have tosed the billfold, after removing its contents, into the nearby cornfields.

Widespread Auto Numbers Mixup Is Seen

Lynchburg, Va., Aug. 31 (AP).—State police here said they had uncovered a practice, reportedly common among automobile dealers and garagemen throughout the state, that is sabotaging the automobile identification and registration system.

Used car dealers and garagemen, according to State Police Sergeant A. C. Elmore, have been removing engine numbers from new blocks placed in automobiles, and stamping on the number from the old block taken from the car.

In some cases, the officer said, the old blocks were rebuilt and installed in other cars, putting on the highway two automobiles with identical engine numbers, or, if the numbers on the old blocks were obliterated, causing cars to be placed in service without engine numbers.

Going to Staunton to check cars recovered without motor numbers in the hope that they might be tied in with a five-car motor vehicle theft ring broken up in Amherst County six months ago, police said they were told by garagemen that the practice was common and had been going on for some time.

The Amherst theft ring made use of number switches in pedaling stolen cars. Ring members would buy wrecked late model cars, take title to a nonexistent car through the block number, then steal an automobile to match the block. At their remote headquarters in Pleasanton, they would reassemble the motor, remove the original motor number and stamp on the block number for which they had title.

Commenting on the practice followed by garagemen, Sergeant Elmore said "they are playing right into the car thief's hands."

Thieves Make Good Haul at House Party

Second-story prowlers who ransacked a Northwest Washington home during a house party highlighted weekend robbery reports here yesterday.

Theodore P. Smyrnas told police thieves raised a ladder to his garage roof while he entertained guests Saturday night on his side porch, at the poposite side of his house.

After ransacking three bedrooms, they departed leaving their ladder behind.

Get Cash and Jewelry

Smyrnas said the thieves took $51 in cash, two $150 wristwatches, and a third wristwatch belonging to his wife, Nancy, and valued at $1000. He said it was pink gold, decorated with garnets, diamonds and rubies. One of the $150 watches, he said, belonged to his wife's sister, Mrs. Dorothy Whiteman of Dallas, Tex., a guest.

Although the thieves apparently moved about freely, pulling out all the bureau drawers in search for valuables, none of the party of six heard them, he said.

In another police case, a man with a crutch he apparently didn't need was identified by police as Gilbert John Foster, 36, of 2424 17th st., nw., who was captured by his intended victim.

He was caught in a brief but fleet-footed chase by Jack Dehn, of 1841 Wyoming ave., nw., after the suspect was surprised by Mrs. Dehn in the act of looting their bedroom. Some 15 mines earlier, police said, he had been caught and freed by another householder three blocks away.

Freed After Capture

Police said Foster had taken a pocketbook with $2.60 from the living room of the home of Comdr. and Mrs. William I. Bull, of 2017 Belmont rd. nw., at 10:15 p. m., Saturday. Mrs. Bull saw him there, screamed, and the man fled, carrying his crutch.

Commander Bull gave chase, caught him outside the home, forced him to give up the money and pocketbook, and let him go with a warning.

"He was a rather pathetic-looking creature," Commander Bull explained. "After we let him go my wife and I talked it over and decided we'd better report him to police. When I was giving them his description they told me he must be the man they had just caught.

"He had a slight limp, but I doubt now that he really needed a crutch."

Mrs. Dehn said that when she surprised Foster in their bedroom he had taken off his shoes and hat and put them in a corner with his crutch. She said she grappled with him but he broke loose and fled, leaving crutch, hat and shoes behind.

She said he had her husband's wallet, with $80, in his hand, but that he dropped it before fleeing.

Dehn caught him in the 1700 block of Beaton pl. nw., a short two blocks away, after a spirited chase.

Kin Visit Cell Of Wife Held In Va. Slaying

Woodstock, Va., Aug. 31 (AP).—Attractive, 45-year-old Mrs. George Allen Emmart slept fitfully in her cell at Shenandoah County Jail here today and saw her brother and sister briefly as a murder charge was being prepared which Sheriff Oscar Sheetz said would be filed against her tomorrow.

The slight, 5-foot-5 blonde was arrested late last night after her pharmacist-husband was shot and killed in the office of his crowded Strasburg drug store.

Father Lives Here

[Emmart's father, George W. Emmart, lives at 6208 New Hampshire ave. ne.

[The slain Strasburg pharmacist lived in Washington most of his life. He operated a drug store in Presidential Gardens, Alexandria, for a number of years, leaving for Strasburg about three years ago.]

One eyewitness, Raymond Borden, said a woman entered Emmart's office shortly after 9 o'clock last night and with the remark, "I told you I was going to kill you," she fired two shots.

Commonwealth's Attorney Ripley Walker said he believed "another woman" was the motive for the shooting.

Borden, a lumber dealer, said he was talking with Emmart and going over plans for the druggist's new house when Mrs. Emmart walked through the office carrying a small cosmetic case and entered the prescription room.

Borden said she reappeared a few moments later, said "How do you do?" to him and then pulled out a .22-caliber target pistol.

7000 Students Vex Schools At Alexandria

Construction Lags Behind Expansion Of City Population

A record enrollment of 7000 students, expected when Alexandria's public schools open Thursday, will bring a new burden to overtaxed schools.

The 7000 pupils will represent a 25 per cent increase over 1940 enrollments, while Alexandria's school construction has lagged far behind the expansion in population.

Some students have been reading their lessons in basement rooms and in office space because of cramped conditions. Primary grade children go to school only half a day for lack of room, and some of them must walk 22 city blocks to do that.

Adopt 5-Year Plan

To cope with the situation, the Alexandria school board has adopted a five-year-plan with the blessing—though not as yet the necessary appropriation—from the City Council.

Plans call for construction of four new schools, additions to four others and the eventual construction of a new high school in the fast growing northwest section. School Board Chairman Edward D. Reed, himself a high school principal in the District, thinks it will take $3,500,000 to bring the physical plant up to date and provide for future expansion.

The city has had the plan on the books all through the war. But only during the last year and a half has it been able to act.

Dickers For Sites

Reed lists four new buildings as immediate "musts." They are: (1) An elementary school in northeast Alexandria, (2) an elementary school at Parkfairfax, (3) a Negro high school, (4) an elementary school in southern Alexandria.

Last year there were 226 elementary school students in the area around N. Washington st. who had to walk as far as 22 blocks to the nearest school. This city is now trying to purchase a two-block site between N. Pitt and N. Royal sts., from Montgomery to Second sts.

The city is also dickering for a three-block site just north of the Parker-Gray School for a new Negro high school. The present building serves as a high-elementary school combined, and classes overflow into offices and basement rooms. A substandard collection of books in one classroom serves as a library. There are almost no athletic facilities.

The Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., owner of Parkfairfax, has offered a site and $50,000 toward the construction of a more suitable elementary school there. Only school today for this community of 5000 is a small prefabricated elementary school built during the war as a Federal Works Agency project. A large permanent building is planned there to check the overflow into other overtaxed schools nearby.

Payrolls Show Increase in Montgomery

Gain of 1.4 Million Reported for Firms With Job Benefits

Payrolls in Montgomery County increased more than $1,400,000 between March, 1946, and March, 1947, in firms covered by unemployment compensation, other than chain stores.

This gain was reported in an employment survey of Montgomery County announced yesterday by Russell S. Davis, chairman of the Employment Security Board for Maryland.

Total payroll figures for the county in the quarter January-March, 1946, were $4,212,749, while for the same quarter in 1947 they were $5,614,110 for firms with unemployment compensation coverage, Davis reported.

Commercial Activity Extended

The analysis showed commercial activities in the county are constantly being extended to keep up with an increasing demand for shopping facilities and other services.

Little change in number of businesses was evident during the war years, but in January, 1946, expansion plans were well under way, Davis said. There was an increase of 3.3 per cent in the number of firms located in Montgomery County covered by unemployment compensation benefits, while employment in these same units increased 8.1 per cent, exclusive of chain stores controlled by outside management.

In March, 1947, a further increase of 200 establishments, or a gain of 20.7 per cent more than March, 1946, was reported. This brought the number of covered establishments in the county to 1163, with a total employment of 10,600 workers, as contrasted with 963 establishments employing 8700 in March, 1946.

Heavy gains in new companies were made in the construction industry, with an increase of 31 per cent, and in retail trade, exclusive of chain stores, with a gain of 20 per cent.

Service establishments topped all other industry groups, with 70 per cent increase, while manufacturing industries showed a gain of 16 per cent. Many of these firms are small, sometimes employing only 2 or 3 persons, "but they can be expected to provide constantly increasing services and employment to the communities in which they are located," Davis said.

County Shows Rapid Growth

A study of the census figures for the past 15 years attests the rapid growth of Montgomery County, Davis said. The population of the county in 1930 was 49,026. The next decade brought 83,912 more county residents, or a 71.2 per cent increase by April, 1940. An additional gain of 24.1 per cent, exclusive of men in the armed forces, was shown in later estimates of the Census Bureau.

Air Travel Drops in July Compared With 1946

94,240 Passengers Carried in and Out Of National Airport, CAA Report States

A sharp decease in the number of passengers arriving and leaving at the Washington National Airport in July is reported by the Civil Aeronautics Administration.

Scheduled flights carried 94,240 persons in and out of the airport in July of this year, against 120,552 passengers tallied by CAA for July, 1946—a drop of more than 21 per cent.

A CAA spokesman mentioned two factors as probably contributing to the smaller amount of air travel in and out of Washington.

Cites Reasons for Drop

First, he recalled that the business of Congress during the last few weeks before the July 26 adjournment this year was largely budgetary. This, he believed, brought fewer people to Washington as the national interest waned in the work of the national legislature, while the 1946 session, which worked through the month, drew greater attention during its closing weeks.

The second factor cited was a decrease in the number of men and women in uniform who use the airlines considerably on their leaves and on military business.

A possible third reason for the decreased air travel, the effect of three major air crashes on the flying public, was held not to be much of a factor in the July statistics, as the period covered began about a month after the year's worst disasters occurred.

9796 Flights Handled

Some 9796 scheduled plane flights arrived and departed from the local port in July, as compared with 9826 in July, 1946. Nonscheduled flights numbered 4563 during the month this year, against 7583 last year. These include military flights.

National figures showed that scheduled airlines had 913 planes in use as of August 1 this year, 174 more than a year ago. Airports in operation numbered 5337 this year, against 4326 last year, with more commercial and municipal ports, but fewer military fields.

Home Builders In Baltimore Invite Probe

Baltimore, Aug. 31 (AP).—President Robert A. Bready said yesterday the Home Builders Association of Baltimore was ready to cooperate with any agency investigating complaints by veterans against local home developers, provided the investigation is a "fair" one.

His statement was issued after William A. Muth, vice president of the city council, asked for a Federal investigation of financing and building of homes for veterans.

The matter came to a head last week when an official of a building company was ordered to refund approximately $50,000 to 94 veterns who charged the company had built them homes without certain features called for in the plans.

William Boucher 3d, chairman of the local chapter of the American Veterans Committee, declared homebuilders and financiers were guilty of "outrages" in their dealings with veterans. He said Federal housing specifications and plans are not "worth the paper they are printed on."

In his statement yesterday, Bready said the association, which includes 80 per cent of home builders in Baltimore, "approximately 60 days ago offered to the Veterans' Administration its cooperation for the purpose of obtaining compliance from any member builder who fails to make good on justifiable complaints filed with the Veterans' Administration."

Virginia Extends Deadline On Car Inspection to Oct. 31

From one-fourth to one-half of the automobiles in the nearby Virginia area are still uninspected, Virginia State Police estimated yesterday.

Originally scheduled to end today, the inspection deadline was extended for a two-month period by Col. C. W. Woodson, jr., state police superintendent, on August 21. The deadline is now October 31.

Principal difficulty in the inspection process lies in the acute shortage of needed parts, it was said. In addition, the fact that 90 per cent of the cars inspected have required repairs or adjustments has sharply limited the number which can be handled daily by the inspecting garages.

Considering that this is the first inspection of cars since early in the war, police said that the results are gratifying. The inspecting garages are working at top speed to handle the required repair work and most motorists seem to be making honest efforts to comply with the regulations, they said.

WAA Streamlines Sales Of Surplus to Veterans

Richmond, Va., Aug. 31—The Richmond regional office of War Assets Administration has announced streamlined sales methods for veterans buying surplus property.

Pre-sale certification by a regional or district WAA office is no longer necessary.

This method of buying has been used on some items since March, and the new regulations extend it to all sales, WAA said. No limit on the number or amount of purchases is imposed under the new ruling.

Complete details concerning the new regulations may be obtained at any WAA Customer Service Center in Washington, Virginia, West Virginia or Maryland.

State Fair Opens Today At Timonium

The Timonium (Md.) State Fair opens today for its annual ten-day stand.

Gates open on the agricultural and home crafts exhibits at 8 a. m. and the big fair area is expected to pulge at the seams before Labor Day is over.

Chief entertainment attraction is the concurrent 10-day race meeting on Timonium's half-mile track.

400 Boys on Hand

After the big Labor Day hubbub, the fair will settle down tomorrow to the mild furore of entertaining some 400 members of boys' 4-H Clubs from 22 of the States's 23 counties.

Each of the 400 are participating in at least one event. They have entered 265 head of dairy cattle, for example, and will have 140 beef steers and 130 hogs in those divisions.

Teams representing 18 counties have been entered in the various club project demonstration contests. Seventeen counties will be represented in dairy judging, 16 in other livestock divisions.

The 4-H Club girls will go through their paces tomorrow too, and most of the youngsters will be back Wednesday for more events, including a calf scramble.

Picnic Tomorrow

There's to be a big 4-H Club picnic on the grounds tomorrow evening. Here is a rough outline of the judging schedule and other events:

Today—Judging of Holstein cattle and Percheron horses and 4-H judging contest.

Tuesday—Judging of Jersey cattle, beef cattle, Belgian horses, hogs and sheep.

Wednesday—Farm Bureau Day—Judging of Guernsey cattle, beef cattle, Clydesdale horses, hogs and sheep, and the team pulling contest.

Thursday—Governor's Day—Judging of Ayrshire and milking Shorthorn cattle, beef cattle, 4-H Club steers, Suffolk horses and hogs.

Friday—Baltimore City Day; Judging of 4-H Club cattle and horses.

Saturday—Baltimore County Day.

Monday, September 8—Horse breeders' show, with classes for thoorughbreds and hunters.

Tuesday—Horse breeders' show, with judging of pony classes.

Thursday—Final day.

Materialism Is Deplored By Dr. Tabor

By Robert Tate Allan
Post Reporter

Worship of materialistic power was deplored yesterday by Dr. L. Ralph Tabor, as traditional Labor Day weekend religious parleys drew 1000 church folks.

Dr. Tabor, pastor of Luther Place Memorial Church, Thomas Circle, addressed 250 delegates to the twenty-sixth annual convention of the Maryland Synod Luther League, United Lutheran Church, at his church.

Meanwhile, upwards of 500 District and Maryland churchmen attended the second day's sessions of the twenty-sixth annual conference of the D. C. Organized Bible Class Association at Western Maryland College, Westminster. The eleventh annual convention of the American Lutheran Church's Luther League, Eastern District, concluded at American University. Disciples of Christ youths from the Capital area sponsored a religious and recreational program at their summer conference camp at Bethany Beach, Del.

Spiritual Culture Lags

Dr. Tabor, told Luther League delegates that "the growth of our spiritual culture has lagged far behind the advances of our technical civilization. Power, far different from that mechanical mark of our age, was the promise of Jesus Christ to His followers. Such power is the need of our whole generation to meet those problems which General MacArthur has called 'basically religious.'"

"Our heritage of power, as Christmas, means power to repent, power to see, and power to transform," said Dr. Tabor. The Luther League convention will conclude with a banquet today at 6 p. m. at the China Clipper Restaurant, near Thomas Circle.

The Labor Sunday program of the Bible Association at Western Maryland College began with a Bible Class Hour at 9:30 a. m. and ended with a "Fireside Hour" last night in the lounge of McDaniel Hall.

Dr. Powers Lectures

Maj. Osmund L. Varela, a layman of Chevy Chase Methodist Church, led the Bible Class Hour, which was followed by a lecture by Dr. Edgar Cordell Powers of Baltimore, executive secretary of the Maryland Bible Society, on "How the Word Came to Man." There were discussion groups on "Social and Recreational Program," "Leadership and Class Organization" and "Membership and Publicity," led, respectively, by Miss Margaret E. Ringrose, Calvary Baptist Church; Howard M. Stackhouse, Emory Methodist Church, and Alden W. Hoage, Eldbrooke Methodist Church.

Dr. Paul Christopher Warren, pastor of Baltimore's Second Presbyterian Church, addressed the Sunday morning worship service in Alumni Hall on "Faith." William E. Harward of Calvary Baptist Church presided; Dr. Harry W. Burgan, pastor of Hamline Methodist Church, gave the invocation. Allen M. Laster presided at last night's worship service in Alumni Hall.

The closing program today will include assembly at 9:30 a. m. and the annual association meeting, followed by a lecture by Dr. Powers on "Uses of the Ancient Word in a Modern World." Dr. Warren will address the closing conference session at 2:45 p. m.

Maryland Had 64 Bills of 4810 in House

Maryland Congressmen sponsored 64 of the 4810 bills thrown in the House hopper last year, a survey showed today.

Representative Beall, Republican, of Frostburg, led the list with 21. Of these, 14 were in connection with his work on the House District of Columbia Committee.

Many of the measures introduced by the six Free State members were concerned with Maryland interests.

Others varied from a bill by Representative Sasscer, Upper Marlboro Democrat, to declare Good Friday a legal holiday, to one by Representative Meade, Baltimore Democrat, to authorize local communities to levy taxes on Federal owned real estate.

Nineteen private bills were in the State's total. This is legislation sponsoring the claim of an individual or group against the Government. Sasscer introduced 10 such bills.

D'Allessandro Had Six

Thomas D'Allesandro sponsored six bills before he resigned to become Mayor of Baltimore. Two, concerning easements for a water main in Baltimore across Coast Guard property and Fort McHenry National Monument, were signed by the President.

This is the individual score of Maryland Representatives:

Beall: 21 bills introduced. Besides District legislation, he sponsored a measure to authorize Maryland to construct a bridge across the Chesapeake from Sandy Point to Kent Island; a bill to provide recreational facilities in the Catoctin National Park area, and a bill to amend the Social Security Act to include certain State and municipal employes.

He also proposed a law to exempt from manufacturers' excise tax certain articles sold to nonprofit fire companies. One bill proposed restoration of the Francis Scott Key home.

Representative Fallon, Baltimore Democrat: Five bills, including one to return the USS Constellation to Maryland as a historical shrine, and another to clear flotsam from Baltimore Harbor. Other proposals were to extend the time for GI applications for mustering-out pay, and to make certain imported merchandise subject to the same internal revenue taxes as similar goods of domestic origin. Another involved payments of claims of certain trust companies.

Meade Had Eight Bills

Meade: Eight bills, including one to require insurance and registration of passengers by commercial air lines. He also proposed a Francis Scott Key memorial stamp; that May 1 be declared National Loyalty Day and a legal holiday, and that a veterans' hospital in Baltimore be called Pfc. Carl V. Sheridan Hospital.

Representative Miller, Easton Republican: Five bills, three of them seeking preliminary surveys of Goose Creek, Manakin River and Jenkins Creek, respectively. Two others were private bills.

Sasscer: Total of 19, including one to change the base period for determining the parity price for Maryland tobacco from 1919-29 to 1934-39. Other measures included proposals to provide special pensions to those awarded medals for extraordinary combat heroism, and to provide pensions and compensation to members of the Army Enlisted Reserve in the specialized training program. Two measures asked funds for dredging Mill Creek and Island Creek, St. George's Island. He proposed a bill similar to Beall's on fire companies, and sponsored another to exempt from tax the transportation of persons in boats used for fishing purposes.

Md. Board Will Air Dilemma In Surplus Food Distribution

Easton, Md., Aug. 31 (AP).—Conflicting Federal and State policies on distribution of surplus supplies are expected to be reviewed at a meeting of the Maryland Welfare Board in Baltimore September 8.

Dudley C. Aist, acting chairman of the State committee of the Production and Marketing Administration, said the welfare group would discuss at that time possible solutions to the dilemma that now prevents smaller institutions in Maryland from receiving surplus commodities to which they are entitled under the Federal policy.

Aist's statement was made in response to inquiries by Representative Edward T. Miller (R., Md.) who has made several unsuccessful attempts to obtain surplus potatoes for the Children's Home of the Eastern Shore, where 27 girls are quartered.

Outlining a policy laid down by the United States Department of Agriculture, Aist said white potatoes were allotted to institutions on the basis of 12 pounds an individual per month. He added, however, that the department was "too limited in personnel and time" to deal directly with all institutions and had passed on to State agencies the job of distributing surplus products.

Aist said the distributing agency for Maryland was the State Welfare Board.

In a letter to Miller, J. Milton Patterson, director of the board, said staff limitations prevent that body from handling the distribution of potatoes in quantities smaller than carload lots.

Divorced Man's Two Daughters, 14 and 16, Are Returned to Him When Former Wife Dies; Girls Are Out of Control; He Feels Panicky

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a man 44 and my problem is my daughters, 14 and 16. My wife and I were divorced five years ago, after which the children lived with her. Later she married again.

A year ago I became engaged to a charming girl. Shortly before we were to be married my first wife died. It was then I learned that she had been separated from her second husband for some time. The girls were sent to an aunt temporarily, while my fiancee and I discussed what to do about them.

I was all for bringing them to live with us, but Kay said she would have to meet them first, to be sure she could get along with them at close range. Accordingly, their aunt brought them here for the Easter vacation, when Kay spent much time with them. Later she told me she felt we couldn't succeed if we started marriage with the girls here.

Events Disrupt Father's Plans

I SUPPOSE I was angered and hurt. I have a quick temper anyway. But temper aside, I really did feel I should provide a home for my children, so I told Kay if that's how she felt, it seemed best to call off our marriage.

Some weeks ago the aunt wrote me that she couldn't keep the girls any longer. When I went to get them, she launched a long diatribe against their faults, saying they were leading her own children into wilful ways. Now they're with me and we're trying to manage with a part-time domestic helper. But I find they're completely out of control.

I know I can't cope with the situation myself. I feel like a drowning man and can better understand Kay's misgivings. Would I be shirking my duty if I put them in a foster home and tried to persuade Kay to forgive and marry me? Or is there some other solution? I can't afford boarding school, and even if I could there would be the vacations. D. J.

Daughters Suffer From Bad Breaks

DEAR D. J.: This is a serious complex problem to try to weigh in limited space, since it involves the welfare of your daughters as well as your own.

In view of your chastened insight into Kay's attitude, perhaps marriage plans could be re-negotiated; but from my viewpoint, marriage to Kay should be undertaken only if she were willing to meet you halfway—on a new basis of understanding—in loyally espousing your problem with the girls as one which cannot in decency be buck-passed to outsiders.

In condensing your letter, I've cut out much explanatory material, including your remark that you never saw anything wilful in the girls' behavior "in the old days." In all probability, their problem conduct is a recent development.

Considering the fact that their childhood was blitzed by your divorce, which set them adrift like displaced persons, it's hardly to be expected that they would be model teen-age girls. Moreover, adolescence is usually one of the more difficult periods in child rearing, even in the best of circumstances.

Your favorable early recollection of the girls seems a good omen. It suggested that the foundations of right attitude are there; and that, if brought to anchor and given a sense of home in relation to you, they may yet overcome the ill effects of the past five years.

Adolescents Need Interested Care

ADOLESCENTS in any case need interested parents, whose interest registers in terms of inalienable friendship and steady, firm guardianship of their activities. Your daughters are entitled to look to you for this type of emotional and social advocacy. And if you, their father, fail to give them a worthy example in that respect, then indeed we have cause to despair of their turning out well.

In my opinion, it would be psychologically disastrous for them—the final straw which makes outlaws of youth—if, in the wake of their mother's death, you were to give them the bum's rush after their aunt has cast them off.

As for your plaint that you can't cope—"He can who thinks he can." All things considered, you can't keep the girls with you full-time at present, of course. The best interim solution is boarding school, obviously—which doesn't abrogate family ties, yet provides a supervised regime of work and play. It's false to say you can't afford it. You can, by dint of dutiful sacrifice, if your character is commensurate with your moral obligations.

To find the right school within your means, consult clergymen and educators in your community; and since these are motherless girls, altruistic concessions on point of fee may be forthcoming—as well as aid in vacation planning, if you earnestly seek it. M. H.

Rugs Need Fall Care

If you have not changed your rugs during the summer months a great deal of summer dirt has probably been tracked in. Why not send the downstairs rugs to the cleaner? If you are planning no other changes this fall you will find this added brightness of the rugs will give a newness to the rooms that will perk them up beautifully. We are so careful that everything is clean at all times but the cleaning of the rugs is frequently neglected.

Your Baby—

Bananas May Take Place of Cereal Dish

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

Cereal is one of the first solid foods offered to the baby at about 3 to 4 months of age. It makes a fine and filling food and one that is well liked because of its bland flavor.

But there are babies who do not seem to care for cereal. Or they may not like the one served to them. One small miss of my acquaintance will have nothing to do with cereals containing wheat (and she broke out in a fine rash when first fed it). But she eagerly consumes bananas or cereals made of barley with no digestive upset.

A mother gets unnecessarily disturbed when her baby refuses cereals. She has come to look upon them as a mainstay for breakfast or the night meal and she is perplexed about substitutes.

Some of these may lack all the minerals and vitamins present in a whole grain cereal, but they make filling dishes to be served the child and he may get his minerals and vitamins in some other food.

Breads and crackers made of whole grains may be liked better than these same grains in the form of breakfast food. They, too, may be served with milk or be spread with jelly or for the older child with meat or chicken or cheese.

Bananas, the nice, ripe ones with brown spots, can be mashed for the tiny baby and make an excellent starchy cereal-type food. Babies like them, too.

Suit His Taste

Noodles, all the macaroni-type foods and brown rice are all suitable to the baby past 1 year of age, and they may be served with cream sauce, tomato sauce or cheese sauce, according to his own particular preference.

Potatoes, preferably baked or boiled in the skins, are a good substitute for cereal. For the older child they may be fortified with butter, milk or cheese and make a fine, wholesome, nutritious meal.

It is no cause for dismay if the child does not care for cereals in their traditional form. Give him other starchy, filling foods and make up their lack of vitamins and minerals in other ways.

Dancing by the Book

Smartest dancers on the floor! Whether it's the rumba, waltz or fox trot, Don and Polly swing into step smoothly and confidently. Yet a brief month ago Don was an awkward, timid leader and Polly hardly knew one step from another.

The secret of their amazing success? Home practice! By following clear footprint diagrams, they larned exactly where and how to place their feet in each dance. They achieved grace and rhythm by learning how to carry their weight properly. A sense of timing followed naturally.

They learned how to achieve the graceful wavelike movement characteristic of the waltz. They learned to hold the upper body still in the rumba, and to sway the hips subtly. They learned to glide from a simple dance-walk into a smooth fox trot.

Why not improve your dancing by home practice? Our Reader Service booklet No. 37 teaches the waltz, rumba, fox trot, samba, tango and lindy by means of foot-print diagrams and photographs.

Ask Anne Your Questions on Homemaking

I wish to move a tree (5 to 6 feet in height) from some property I own in Virginia to my home in Maryland. Can you tell me when and if such a move could be made, and how? If possible I should like to move it in my car (a convertible with a large trunk), without paying outside help. E. M. F.

The Washington Post Garden Editor, James H. Beattie, says that if your tree is an evergreen, it may be moved at almost any time during early spring or late summer and autumn. It is well to avoid the period in late spring, he says, as plants are making rapid growth then.

"Evergreens should be lifted and moved with a so-called 'ball' of earth around the roots," he continues. "For a 6-foot evergreen, a ball about 2 feet in diameter and 1 foot thick should be sufficient.

"Deciduous trees should be moved only when the foliage is off. Either fall or early spring, before growth starts, is all right. By all means save as much of the root system as possible and do not allow the roots to dry out. Some of the top branches should be removed to balance the top to the reduced root system.

"You should be able to move a 6-foot deciduous tree by yourself in your car without difficulty," Mr. Beattie concludes. "If it's an evergreen, you will need some help."

We have two second-hand maple chests, the tops of which are badly scarred around the edges by cigarette burns. How can I remove these black burns? Must the tops of the chests be completely refinished? R.S.O.

Refinishing would undoubtedly be the best way to restore the appearance of these chests. However, you may be able to do a patching job on the edges by rubbing down the burns with steel wool, then building up the surface with shellac. Here's the procedure to follow: Wrap fine steel wool (size 0) around the point of a wooden skewer or orange stick. Rub the burn with the steel wool, being very careful not to mar the surrounding surface. Brush thoroughly with a soft brush to remove scrapings. Apply turpentine with a soft, lintless cloth. Let dry. With a fine paint brush, carefully apply a very thin coating of white shellac. Let dry. Apply additional coats of shellac in this way until the desired color is obtained and the burned places filled even with the surrounding area. When the last coat is dry, polish the chest.

How can I clean an old oil (metal) lamp? M. A. B.

Use a regular metal polish of good quality.

What is the best way to keep flour, cornstarch, powdered sugar, and cereal from getting bugs in them? Where do these bugs come from? B. H. D.

The bugs you speak of are known variously as pantry pests, flour beetles, weevils, or bran bugs. It's hard to say where they come from, but there are a few around most residences and they have an uncanny ability for locating opened packages of food. One way to keep food free of them is to store it in tin cans. It's also a good idea to spray shelves and cupboards occasionally with 5 per cent DDT solution. Remove all packages before spraying, and let the shelves dry thoroughly before putting the packages back. Spray about once a month to keep the bugs away.

The Service Set

By Bessie Hackett

THE Easley family is having a reunion in Washington—a reunion with wedding bells and orange blossoms for its climax.

Visiting Col. and Mrs. Bruce Easley, jr., at their home in Woodmoor, Silver Spring, Md., is the colonel's mother, Mrs. Bruce Easley, and sister, Miss Katherine Easley, who've come all the way from Ferron, Utah. They're dividing their time, too, with Maj. and Mrs. Horace P. Easley, who also live in Woodmore, and the youngest Easley brother, Eric Eugene, who will claim Estella Mae Stubbs as his bride on September 13.

Tall, good-looking Gene served as a pharmacist's mate with the Navy in the Pacific, previously attended Toledo University in Ohio. Estella, a pretty, petite brownette, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Stubbs of Gaithersburg, where the wedding will take place in the Epworth Methodist Church. In the meantime, there are numerous prenuptial parties for the engaged couple.

The Seagoing Army

COL. AND MRS. CORNELIUS JADWIN belong to the Army, but when the mercury soars, they believe in being amphibious—and take to the water in their 33-foot cabin cruiser, the El-Co-Ed, whose name is a combination of Cornelius, Eleanor and Edgar, the Jadwins' 21-year-old son.

This summer the Jadwins made a three-week cruise to North Carolina, more recently have been delighting themselves and their friends with a series of small all-day river picnics. Today, however, they plan to spend the holiday at the Corinthian Yacht Club, of which the colonel is commodore. The weekend of the 14th, Edgar, who served as a lieutenant at Casablanca and is getting ready for his sophomore year at Princeton, has invited a couple of friends out for a short cruise and during the three-day President's Cup Regatta, Colonel and Mrs. Jadwin will entertain groups of friends aboard to El-Co-Ed.

Another Army family spending as much of the summer as possible on nearby waterways are the Frank E. Hamiltons and their two sons—Frank Walter (Chips), 6, and 8-month-old Bobby, who, his mother declares, has learned to crawl with a seagoing gait. Their 30-foot cabin cruiser, the Nipah, however, doesn't journey too far from Walter Reed General Hospital, where Colonel Hamilton is chief of surgery.

Yesterday afternoon the Hamiltons took a group of friends for a ride on the Nipah, entertaining them later at dinner at the Corinthian Yacht Club. Their guests included Col. and Mrs. William W. Nichol, Col. and Mrs. Charles Mudgett and Col. and Mrs. F. P. Kintz.

Won't Attend Royal Wedding

Windsors to Be Barred By Social Iron Curtain

By Robert Musel

London, Aug. 31.—The social iron curtain which has barred the Duchess of Windsor from high rank in British society since her marriage a decade ago will be in operation again for the wedding of Princess Elizabeth.

The Baltimore-born duchess will not be invited to the wedding, according to palace sources. The Duke of Windsor will—but won't accept because he refuses to attend any royal function without his wife.

Thus the Duke of Windsor will miss the marriage of his favorite niece because 80-year-old Queen Mother Mary still finds it impossible to forgive the American divorcee for whose love he abdicated.

Duchess Ranks 35th

An authority on the peerage told the United Press that even if the Duchess were invited her presence might occasion her more humiliation than triumph. He pointed out that in the sacred Order of Precedence which rules British society, the Duke of Windsor is a "royal highness" and ranks third to the King and the Duke of Gloucester.

But his exalted rank was conferred on him personally by his brother, King George. No such honor was extended to his duchess, who ranks only thirty-fifth among the women.

In the ceremonies attendant on Princess Elizabeth's marriage to Lieut. Philip Mountbatten in Westminster Abbey November 20, for example, the duchess would not be considered a member of the royal family and would have only the style and privileges of the last duchess to be created.

Actually, were she given the same distinction conferred on her husband she would be preceded only by the Queen, the Queen Mother, the two princesses, the princess royal and the Duchesses of Gloucester and Kent. She would then rank eighth.

Duke Is Upset

"The duke is understood to be quite upset about this disparity in precedence," said the authority.

The search for a suitable title for Lieutenant Mountbatten is still under way. The King is said to favor one that would clearly indicate his connection with the royal family. This may mean a new dukedom and would be created rather than an old one restored. It also is considered possible that Princess Elizabeth will be given a title distinct from that of her husband because her title will be used only until in the normal course of events she succeeds to the throne.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Reelection of Green By AFL Is Predicted

(Editor's Note — While Drew Pearson is on a brief vacation, the Washington Merry-Go-Round is being written by his old partner, Robert S. Allen.)

By Robert S. Allen

Contrary to plans, this will NOT be 75-year-old William Green's last Labor Day as president of the American Federation of Labor.

Green

He will be re-elected for another (his 24th) term at the AFL convention in San Francisco in October.

Weary and ailing, Green had intended to close his active career this year. After his re-election at the 1946 convention, he stated privately it would be his last term. But two major developments have changed the situation.

One was the inability of the inner clique of AFL rulers to get together on a successor to Green. While he is president, Green is actually little more than a figurehead. Real AFL control is wielded by a small coterie consisting of John L. Lewis, William ("Big Bill") Hutcheson, carpenter boss; Daniel Tobin, teamsters czar, and George Meany, burly AFL secretary-treasurer.

All these moguls, plus sundry lesser ones, want Green's job. Power-hungry Lewis is particularly hot after it.

He made strenuous efforts to get it a quarter of a century ago after the death of Samuel Gompers. But other ambitious aspirants scuttled Lewis, who in turn blocked them from snatching the prize. That was how Green got it. He was a relatively unimportant officer in Lewis's miners union, and was accepted as a compromise choice.

At the time, the squabbling AFL chiefs figured Green would hold the presidency only for a year or so until they could get together among themselves. But that was the big hitch. They never could get together, and rather than allow one of their number to get the office, they continued to reelect Green.

After 24 years, the same situation still largely prevails. While nominally pals, none is eager to see one of the others in the top job. That is particularly true as regards Lewis, whose autocratic proclivities are well known to them.

The other factor influencing the continuance of Green is the Taft-Hartley Act. The AFL is planning an all-out election fight next year against congressional supporters of this law. Unity within the AFL is vital. A free-for-all over the federation's president might endanger unity. So Green will be kept on—barring some unpredictable upset by Lewis.

If he is planning any applecart booting he will probably do it at the executive council meeting September 8 in Chicago. Final convention arrangements will be decided there. Also, Green intends to announce he will run again.

No upset is expected in inner AFL circles. But Lewis is a law unto himself, and as long as he's around anything can happen.

Note: Meany, New York Republican and a Dewey backer, hopes eventually to land Green's job as a compromise candidate.

Roses for a Miss

Six-year-old Patricia McMahon's biggest thrill this summer was the day her daddy, Connecticut's Senator Brian McMahon, took her to see President Truman.

As father and daughter were about to leave their home for the all-important event, the pretty, blue-eyed little miss suddenly announced she had "forgotten something." Dashing off, she ran into the garden and picked two big red roses.

The President was immensely pleased when she presented them to him. Taking Pat by the hand, he escorted her to the rose garden, just outside his office, and cut two of the prize blooms for her. "They're just your size," the President said beaming.

"I'd say you got a pretty good bargain, Pat," her father said as they drove homeward. "What are you going to do with the roses the President gave you?"

"Why, daddy, you ought to know that," Pat said primly. "I'm going to put them in my memory book, of course."

Unprecedented Agency

This is a story about a remarkable Government lending agency. Instead of losing money, it has made a great deal of it—105 million dollars to be exact.

The phenomenon is the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation, created in 1934 by the New Deal when Henry Wallace was Secretary of Agriculture. Further, the man chiefly responsible for the success of FFMC is a professor. He is Dr. William I. Myers, dean of Cornell University's Agricultural School, and the first head of the agency.

The FFMC bill was introduced in Congress as an emergency to bolster the depression-racked farm economy. It was frankly admitted the corporation probably would lose a great deal of money. But it was held the measure was necessary to halt the flood of foreclosures and bankruptcies then engulfing farmers.

To raise the corporation's capital, Dr. Myers embarked on a bold gamble. He bought hundreds of millions dollars' worth of 4 per cent interest Federal Land Banks bonds on Government-guaranteed 3 and 3¼ per cent FFMC bonds. The profit in the interest was designed to offset the risk involved in lending to mortgage-loaded farmers.

In the 13 years of its operations, FFMC has loaned a total of $1,200,000,000. The severe drought year of 1936 was the peak, with 837 million dollars in outstanding loans.

The war saved the corporation. More than 250,000 farmers paid off their mortgages in full. In the past six years, FFMC has collected 500 million dollars in repayments.

The corporation is now starting to liquidate. This will take time, as there is still 135 million dollars in outstanding loans. Corporation officials are hoping debtor farmers will pay up while agriculture is still prosperous.

Meanwhile the corporation has a surplus of 105 million dollars. And, unlike the RFC, which is nine million dollars in the red, FFMC officials are in no fear of a Congressional investigation. Congress thinks so highly of the agency that, at the last session, its budget was untouched.

Chief operating official of FFMC is Executive Vice Presdent Harris Willingham, tall, drawling Virginian, who whimsically describes his agency as "a vivid case of man biting dog."

LAST TIME AROUND for "The Informer" is what the Little Theater's management says of the famed 1935 academy award winner. The picture is currently playing at the 9th st. movie house. Victor McLaglen and Margot Grahame are featured

Little Theater's 'Playhouse' To Be Located on 15th Street

THE EXACT location of the Little Theater's big sister movie house was announced yesterday by Louise Noonan Miller and her partner, Ilya Lopert. Hereafter, Washington devotees of foreign moving pictures and revivals of outstanding homemade ones can include 15th st. and the vicinity of the United States Treasury in their orbit of cinema-seeking.

Name of the new theater, as announced previously, has also been confirmed as the Playhouse, and the street number is 727 15th st. nw., a site that has gone through several phases since it began life as a banking institution awhile back. Opening date is the only bit of information not yet quite clear, but needless to say, the Playhouse will be in operation as soon as permitted by today's building jam-ups.

The new theater will seat something like 500 persons—almost twice as many as its nonidentical twin, the Little—and will function under the same policy. What it means to Washingtonians is that their opportunity for seeing some of the superior foreign flickers more rapidly than in the past is increased by one-half.

Early on the schedule which will presumably be split between the Little and the Playhouse are films like "Children of Paradise" (French), "Torment" (Swedish), "Shoe Shine" (Italian) and "Cage of Nightingales" (also French). Most of these pictures, which have received acclair in both this country and abroad, have been knocking around New York for some time and are overdue on local screens. The advent of the Playhouse means they'll flash into your ken sooner than otherwise.

One result of the new twin combination will be the clearing up of any such situation as arose when Olivier's "Henry V" took over the screen at the Little and edged out all other entries for several months. With a brace of show places, a foreign film can afford to be good enough to stay for as long as it pleases without bottle-necking other features.

Gary Can't Forget Days of Hard Work

HOLLYWOOD—I talked with Gary Cooper on the "Good Sam" set. Gary said: "When I was in Southampton you were touring the Midwest, and I read your story about those combine boys who bring in the wheat. I worked at that job before all these new gadgets were invented. My hands were calloused from the first knuckle to the middle of my palm. In Montana, fields of wheat run for miles, and in my day we had to pitch the wheat with forks instead of machinery."

"That quality of Coop's of not forgetting his hard working days seems to creep into the characters he portrays on the screen . . . When I asked what his next picture would be, he said: "I'd tell you if I knew. But I don't. I won't start another one until next year" . . . The Cooper family will have their usual holiday at Sun Valley. Said Coop: "If you'll come along, I promise to take you around and introduce you to the ranchers. Might even take you hunting" . . . I watched Gary do a scene for "Good Sam" in a crowded bus, with a talkative lady who heckled the driver. Every one on the set was hysterical watching the driver's close-up. He did a new kind of slow burn that will get belly laughs.

Leo McCarey was busy talking with a young priest who was visiting the set . . . Joan Lorring, with her new blond hair, was getting ready for her big scene . . . I learned that McCarey's new juvenile find, Dick Ross, is the twin brother of Bartlett, who's engaged to Harold Lloyd's daughter, Peggy.

Planning Ahead

Bing Crosby is interested in a story about Quakers, titled "The Friendly Persuasion," which may be the first picture Frank Capra will produce for Paramount . . . Judy Garland, home from the East, gained five pounds and is feeling very fit. The minute she got home she picked up her baby and went down to the beach house for more sun . . . Joe Pasternak is purring over Lotte Lehman's test for a big dramatic singing role in "The Big City."

Peggy Cummins' mother, Margaret Tracy, who's just finished "Sign of the Ram," is being tested for the part of Ingrid Bergman's mother in "Joan of Lorraine" . . . Even though you don't believe the story of "Golden Earrings," you'll like the performances of Marlene Dietrich and Ray Milland. Marlene plays a ragged, smelly gypsy, but somehow she manages to snare a stuffy Englishman, played by Milland. The highlights of the picture are Milland's fight with Murvyn Vye, and Vye's singing.

Dailey News

Dan Dailey proved he was worthy of costar billing in "Mother Wore Tights," and goes into "Flapper Age" with Jeanne Crain. Dan says that to his way of thinking, Eleanor Powell is the greatest all-around feminine dancer of them all; Betty Grable displays the best showmanship; Tamara Toumonova is the best ballerina; Vera Ellen's trick dancing beats them all, and the most graceful is Cyd Charisse. That statement should bring a torrent of abuse on his fair head.

Air Mail Society Ends Convention

By William M. Stuart

The annual convention of the American Air Mail Society was brought to a close last night with a banquet at the Raleigh Hotel.

M. O. Warns of Milwaukee, Wis., president, was in charge and presented as toastmaster Sol Glass of Baltimore. Guests present were post office and airplane officials and members from many sections of the country.

The society was present in a body at the release of the new 10-cent air mail stamp yesterday morning at the Pan American Building with an appropriate program.

The election of officers was announced as follows: President, M. O. Warns, Milwaukee, Wis.; vice presidents, Mrs. Louise S. Davis, J. P. V. Heinmuller, Ernest A. Kehr and Parham C. Nahl; secretary, Claude W. Degler; treasurer, Glen W. Glaser; directors, Alton J. Blank, Mrs. Grace Conrath, Sol Glass, Orian S. Green, Rear Adm. Jesse G. Johnson, Miss Laura J. LeVesque and Rafael Oriel.

An auction sale was held of air mail items, chiefly covers, by Joseph H. Spiegelberg, of the Aero-Philatelic Exchange of this city.

The exhibition, though small in the number of frames, was one of the finest displays of air mail stamps and covers, including crash covers, ever shown in Washington.

Sol Glass exhibited the famous 24-cent invert with other 24-cent stamps, covers and other material of the rarest possible items. This display was one of the outstanding features of the convention.

John Heinmuller of New York exhibited Graf Zeppelin covers and stamps of unusual rarity and condition, and Ellery Denizon displayed two frames of China covers, stamps and oddities.

The convention in 1948 will probably be held in Havana, Cuba, as the air mail society of Cuba has extended an invitation to meet there.

FOR BEST SERVICE PLACE YOUR ADS EARLY

The steadily growing volume of classified ads in The Post, combined with the practice of many advertisers who phone late in the day, is making it difficult to devote the time and assistance to these late callers which is needed to prepare the most effective possible copy.

DRUM POINT BEACH
Not promises—Not Dreams—but a reality. The first announcement of DRUM POINT BEACH made mention of big doings—and NOW they are a reality. New streets, new homes under construction, and new sections being opened up offering still more and more attractive cottage sites for the prudent investor.
DRUM POINT BEACH offers a perfect setting for idyllic summer vacations and for year 'round living also. Many of the people who have already purchased large attractive homesites have planned for their retirement in this private paradise where the steadily lapping waters of Chesapeake Bay sing a soothing lullaby through the leaves and branches of the stately trees.
From your comfortable retreat at DRUM POINT BEACH you'll pity pent friends. You will enjoy the miles and miles of wide white sandy beach and the swell fishing in the 4 sparkling clear spring-fed fresh water lakes.
Make it a point to come down today, tomorrow, or any day of the week and pick out a large attractive wooded cottage site, either on the water or overlooking the water. There is always a representative on the property to show you around and to discuss the easy terms on which a purchase may be made.

THE DISTRICT LINE

District Match Folder Brings "Business" From Reich

District Grocery Stores, Inc., has received the following letter from a mechanic in the American zone of Germany:

"From an American soldier I received a package of matches and a few cigarettes. He had trouble with his tires and I helped him to change them.

"On the package of matches there was your pretty ad for coffee and butter, and so I thought maybe it would be possible for you—but please don't get mad at me—to send me and my children some of the advertised good things.

"We would be most obliged to you and may God thank you for your kindness."

Lou Krakow at DGS says that they're sending some coffee and a butter substitute (since butter would become rancid in transit).

The next time I'm tempted to gripe about the taste of a cup of coffee, I hope I remember that some people have been brewing old inner tubes for the past few years.

CAN YOU TOP THIS?

We recently ran an item about a donor who had given her 14th pint of blood.

Leonard C. Bluebond, who works at the National Bureau of Standards and lives at 3118 16th st. nw., tops that mark by ten pints. He postcards:

"I've given 24 pints to the Red Cross blood bank. If anybody needs type 'B' blood, he can have some of mine."

LATEST MODEL

I suppose you've already heard of the new-type ball point pens?

DISPUTE

When I order coffee on a railroad diner, I leave the spoon in the cup between sips, to minimize sloshing.

But the gimlet-eyed gal across the table always says it's bad manners. Is it?

CAT GOT YOUR TONGUE?

Mrs. Pamela C. Gosnell of 605½ Main st., Laurel, Md., owns one of the smartest cats I've ever encountered.

When tabby was a kitten, he lost his voice as the result of a neck injury. Now, when he "wants out," he can't mew like an ordinary cat—but he's devised a much better system of communication.

He jumps up on the keyboard of the Gosnell piano, and pads his way from bass to treble.

If his call isn't answered as quickly as he thinks it should be, he bangs back down the scale to the bass keys again, and continues to pace back and forth until somebody opens the door.

Kitten on the keys, eh?

BLUEGE'S BATTLERS

Accountant C. M. C. wonders why the Washington Senators, an American League team, are known as the "Nationals."

On their season's record, he thinks that we should at least change the spelling a bit, and call them the "Gnats."

YAK YAK YAK

TELEVISION QUERY

Mae Nelbach, Ted Nelbach, and Dick Graham postcard from Alexandria, Va.:

"Please help us before a beautiful friendship goes to pot. What is the verb form of the noun 'television'?

"Should we say 'the boxing matches will be televised tonight' or 'the boxing matches will be televiewed tonight'?"

I put the question to Art King, managing editor of Broadcasting Magazine. He replied:

"The television people have been making up their own language as they go along. Anything that's in common use is considered to be correct. However, I'll do some research on the problem and let you know."

While you're investigating, Art, see if you can find out when television receivers will be cheap enough for ordinary folks to afford.

Mormon Shop Bans Gunther Book

New York—Capt. Henry Gellerman returned from Europe a few days ago, after completing a Government mission abroad. During his trip to Poland he visited the deposed Mikelajczek in Warsaw, where he publishes a small newspaper. "Captain," asked Mikelajczek, "do you know that Poland is the biggest country in Europe today?" . . . Captain Gellerman shook his head . . . "Well, it is," said Mikelajczek. "Our western border is on the Oder, our government in Moscow and half our population in Siberia."

In Germany Captain Gellerman visited the Munich jail where Fritz Kuhn was awaiting a hearing by the denazification board. He questioned the former Bund leader, and then asked: "Have you any message for your former buddies in the States?" . . . "Yes," replied Kuhn. "You can tell them that 65 million Germans are basking themselves in the sun of democracy and are getting redder every day."

Eugene Ormandy, the conductor, visited a Hollywood set and told a story to Dana Andrews. "That's a wonderful story," Andrews said to him. "Please tell it again" . . . Ormandy recited the story again . . . "Wait here one minute," Andrews told him—then went to his director and suggested an additional scene for the movie, a scene showing Ormandy telling the story. The director listened to Ormandy telling the story a third time—then had a stenographer record and type the story, inserted it into the script and told the conductor: "We'll put you into the picture. All you have to do is tell the story you've just told us" . . . Ormandy was given the script, and then spent the entire afternoon trying, in vain, to memorize the words he had repeated four times that day.

The Mormon book shop at Salt Lake City has banned the sale of John Gunther's "Inside the U. S. A." The Mormons also have asked the other book shops to ban it and if they disregard this request, at least to avoid displaying it prominently.

Monday night Pittsburgh's home-run king, Kiner, was taken to the Stork Club by one of the Pirate coaches, who felt that Kiner was too tense and needed relaxation. Tuesday afternoon the relaxed Kiner got five hits in five times at bat. . . . Dan Bankhead, the Negro pitcher, who made his big league debut with the Dodgers, is from Alabama. Bankhead has a 9-year-old daughter named Waillulah.

ARE YOU IN FAVOR OF LABOR UNIONS?

DO YOU FAVOR THE RIGHT TO STRIKE?

A coast-to-coast Gallup Poll, reported in tomorrow's Washington Post, brings you America's answers to these two questions. The Gallup Poll has tested America's attitude toward unions several times since 1937. That year 72% expressed approval of unions. In 1939 this had dropped to 68%, in 1940 64%, and in 1941 61%. Is the postwar trend up or down for unions? Sunday's Post brings you the answer, shows you also what proportion think strikes should be forbidden. Don's miss this chance to compare your own attitude with that of others. Remember—the Gallup Poll appears only in The Washington Post in Washington.

THE HECHT COMPANY SALUTES THE CITIZENS OF WASHINGTON WHOSE HOMES ARE IN

MISSISSIPPI . . . the magnolia state

We members of the Mississippi State Society feel that The Hecht Company is performing a worthwhile community service by making the citizens of Washington better acquainted with each of the forty-eight States. Mississippi early achieved a prominent place in the Nation . . . particularly as a great agricultural State. Today she is combining her achievements of the past with her vision of the future to further her achievements both in agriculture and industry. Mississippi is the heart of one of the richest raw materials sections in the Nation . . . and these natural resources are being fully used for industrial purposes. A spirit of advance is alive throughout the State—with hundredfold increases in manufactured products during the last fifteen years. The Mississippi State Society in Washington is working hand in hand with its friends back home to promote cotton as an industrial product. In collaboration with the Tennessee State Society, we sponsor the Cotton Ball, an annual event in Washington . . . and send the Queen of Cotton on a European tour . . . to better acquaint people of the world with the versatile uses of our products around which the lives of Mississippians have so long revolved. We cherish the tradition of Mississippi . . . a tradition of adventurous pioneers; wealth from cotton plantations; lovely Southern mansions; and picturesque old river towns. But we strive to build a new life for our State, through increasing industrial progress, to yield increasing benefit to Mississippi, and through her, to the country as a whole.
